Weapon may be Garrison link

KENNETT - Mystery still surrounds the Sept. 8 murder of Lee Ann Garrison, the attractive mother of four children who was found slain in her stately mansion on the south end of this Dunklin County city.

Since her body was discovered, Missouri law enforcement authorities have pressed for the return of the 32-year old woman's ex-husband, Dr. Norman A. Garrison Jr., from Cornith, Miss., to face a first-degree murder charge.

A gun, suspected of being the possible murder weapon, was recovered last week from a Parma Man arrested in Somerville, Tenn., for armed robbery and kidnaping.

Hobert Goodman was arrested and charged by Fayette County, Tenn., authorities Nov. 14 following a chase in which he tried to elude police who sought him in connection with the robbery of a Moscow, Tenn. service station and abduction of the station owner's wife.

Goodman, who was released from the Missouri State Penitentiary in October after serving seven years on an armed robbery charge from Dunklin County, told authorities that he stole the 22-caliber revolver in Memphis and has denied any knowledge of the Garrison slaying.

"Man. . . I don't know those people," Goodman said. "I've only read about that (killing) in the papers."

The pistol, with five cartridges and an empty hull still in the cylinder, showed definite signs of some kind of stain around the butt and hammer and particles of lint and hair inside the handles.

Dunklin County authorities had speculated that Mrs. Garrison had been killed with her own gun, which turned up missing after she was found brutally beaten and shot about mid-morning by her 13-year-old daughter by a previous marriage. According to the autopsy report, she had V-shaped marks about her head, which indicated that she was possibly beaten with an object.

Dr. Garrison, when questioned about his wife's gun, said that he had obtained a 32-caliber Smith and Wesson model for her sometime before their separation.

A piece of a gun handle, found near the scene of the crime and believed to be from the murder weapon, was inscribed with the initials H and R. The gun recovered in Tennessee, a Harrison-Richardson model, was reported stolen in Sidney, Neb., in 1971.

A definite distinction could be noticed from the handles on the gun. Neither seemed to fit well and one looked newer than the other. The crews holding the handles were badly worn.

The Daily Standard has learned of an apparent assassination attempt against Dr. Garrison on the same evening that Goodman was arrested some 75 miles from Cornith.

Alcorn County, Miss., authorities told of having two men under serveillance that night, but would not divuldge any names or other information.

Goodman told authorities he stole the gun in Memphis earlier in the day from a parked car. "I saw the barrel sticking out of a sack and opened the door and took it," Goodman said.

When arrested, he had some loose cartridges in his pocket and a box of shells.

Market robbed of $94

A lone gunman took $94 from the E-Z Food Mart, 903 Davis Blvd., about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, according to police.

Police said a black male with a woman's stocking pulled over his face entered the store through the rear entrance and ordered an employee, Johnny Rodgers, 110 Adams St., to give him the money. The man was carrying a small-caliber pistol.

Rodgers gave him the money and the man fled out the rear door. He was last seen running west.

Police picked up two suspects a short time later in a car seen leaving the area.

Police now report the two had nothing to do with the robbery, but are being held for investigation of marijuana possession. Police said they would know later today whether the substance found in the car was actually marijuana.

Work begins on emergency bills

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—A fourth bill to revise the state's interest laws was introduced today by Rep. Bob Griffin as the legislature opened the second day of a special session.

The House sent two previously introduced bills rasing the state's 8 per cent interest ceiling, the lowest in the nation, to the banking committee and an emergency appropriations bill for the Social Services Department and the secretary of state to the Appropriations Committee.

Hearings on the funding measure were to start later today while the usury bills were not expected to receive committee consideration until next week.

The Senate, going back to work just before noon, sent its bill revising the usury law to the Banking Committee, which had scheduled an afternoon hearing.

The latest interest rate-related bill sponsored by the Cameron Democrat calls for raising the interest rate to be paid on court-ordered judgments from 6 per cent to 8 per cent.

That interest is paid under state law on judgments from the time they are ordered by the court until they are actually paid.

The session, the fourth this year, opened Tuesday with Gov. Christopher S. Bond expanding his original call to include an appropriation for implementation of the revised campaign financing law, which was overwhelmingly approved by voters Nov. 5.

That measure calls for three reports covering contributions and expenses of candidates who spend more than $500 in their campaign and for reports of economic status from all candidates.

Although Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick has said it will cost about $200,000 to implement the law through next June, the end of the fiscal year, the bill introduced in the House by Rep. Clarence Heflin, D-Independence, vice chairman of the Appropriations Committee, calls for funding of only $97,449.

"Although the expenses of this new law will not be large at first," Bond said in his message to the legislature, "there is the need to provide assistance for the filing of reports, for staff for the commission and for the costs incurred in publication of notices for the election."

Bond also indicated that he expected the Missouri Election Commission, which will oversee the law, to be established by Jan. 1, the date the measure goes into effect. Eighteen persons must be nominated by the state Supreme Court and six appointed by the governor to the commission.

The Senate bill on the usury law, co-sponsored by four senators including Democratic banker Al Spradling of Cape Girardeau, chairman of the Banking Committee, calls for removal of any ceiling on home loan mortgages, as does one of the House bills, sponsored by Minority Floor Leader Robert Snyder of Kirkwood.

Snyder's proposal sets a 10 per cent ceiling on loans between $500 and $5,000 while the Senate measure raises the ceiling to 15 per cent on loans between $500 and $2,500.

The second House bill, introduced by Speaker Pro Tem Richard DeCoster of Canton, merely raises the interest ceiling on all loans over $500 to 10 per cent and is similar to a bill that failed to gain approval in the regular legislative session this year.

Snyder's bill, drafted by the governor's office, and the Senate proposal both include:

—No ceiling on first deeds of trust for real estate or mobile homes.

—No ceiling on corporation loans, which are exempt under the current law.

—No ceiling on interest for loans in excess of $5,000 made to small businesses.

—No ceiling on interest on loans over $5,000 where stock or other negotiable instruments are used as collateral.

—Elimination of points, which have been used, according to officials, as a way of circumventing the 8 per cent ceiling. There would be no restriction, however, on points charged in reselling mortgages financed by a federal agency.

DeCoster's bill treats points as part of the interest, which would be limited to no more than 10 per cent.

"I recognize in proposing increases in statutory interest rates that consumers will have, in many cases, to pay more for loans in Missouri," the governor said, "but they should be able to obtain loans which would otherwise be unavailable."

Senate President Pro Tem William Cason of Clinton said consideration of about 100 appointments made by the governor in the wake of state reorganization this summer will be considered beginning Monday.

He estimated that more than 90 of them will be handled within 10 days but that six or seven, including the most controversial, could take the maximum 30-day statutory period.

Among those appointments needing Senate confirmation that are expected to run into opposition are those of Commissioner of Administration Robert James and Agriculture Director James Boillot, who has been criticized for his role in leasing the state fairgrounds for the ill-fated Ozark music festival last July.

Michigan man dies of accident injuries

A Michigan man was fatally injured, four persons were seriously injured and three received minor injuries in four area traffic accidents Tuesday, the highway patrol announced today.

John Newton, 34, of Detroit, Mich., was critically injured at 9:20 a.m. Tuesday on Highway 60 five miles east of Charleston.

He died at 3:45 p.m. Tuesday after being admitted to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Rufus Garland Price, 30, of Detroit, Mich., rounded a curve, went out of control, crossed the centerline and struck head- on with a pick- up truck driven by Phillip Daniel Blackman, 21, of Charleston who was traveling east. Price received serious injuries and Blackman received minor injuries.

A passenger in Price's car, Leon Moore, 16, of Detroit, and a passenger in Blackman's car, Cecil Dewey Health, 69, of East Prairie were also seriously injured.

All were taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

A St. Francis, Ark., man was seriously injured in an accident at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday on Highway 53 one mile south of Qulin.

The accident occurred when Lewis, who was traveling north fell asleep at the wheel. His car crossed the center line and struck a southbound pick-up truck driven by Richard Wayne Wright, 24, of Poplar Bluff.

Lewis was taken to the Poplar Bluff Hospital.

Myrtle Cox, 76, of Qulin received minor injuries at 3:40 p.m. Tuesday one mile north of Qulin on a county road.

The accident occurred when a southbound car driven by Walter Suiter, 18, of Qulin approached a blind intersection and struck the rear of an eastbound car driven by Oren Cox, 62, of Qulin.

Suzanne M. Paynic of Roxana, Ill., received minor injuries at 12:15 a.m. today five miles east of Doniphan on U.S. 160 in a one- vehicle accident.

According to the patrol, the accident occurred when a car driven by Miss Paynic rounded a curve at a high rate of speed and struck a bridge railing.

School bond approved

DEXTER-- Voters in the Dexter school district Tuesday approved a $1.3 million bond issue in a special election.

Voting in favor of the issue were 880 persons and opposing it, 113. Funds from the bond will be used to construct a new junior high school and add five additional classrooms to the present senior high school.

The new school will be built on a 17- acre tract just south of the present high school.

Liquor store holdup nets $300 to $400

NEW MADRID - Robert's Sundries Liquor Store, 317 Main St., Tuesday night became one of the latest marks in a series of armed robberies in the Bootheel when a lone white male armed with a revolver made off with between $300 and $400.

City Marshal Virgil "Flip" Dees said the man, who appeared to be in his early 20s, entered the store about 6:15 p.m. and asked the clerk, Miss Estelle Hendricks, for a six pack of beer. When she asked him for identification, he pulled the gun from under his jacket and asked for the money, Dees reported. The robber was described as 5 foot 8 inches tall, weighed 150 pounds, with dark long hair. He was reportedly wearing dark clothing.

Baugher critically injured in accident

Loy Baugher, 56, 318 Edmondson Drive, was critically injured at 5:40 p.m. Tuesday when his car slammed into the rear of a two-ton truck on North Main Street.

Baugher was in the intensive care unit at Missouri Delta Community Hospital this morning suffering from head and chest injuries.

Baugher is a retired photographer and formerly operated the Baugher Studio on South Main Street.

Baugher's car struck the back of a farm implement truck driven by Carl Thomas Mitchell, 46, of Central City, Ky., while the truck was stopped in the northbound lane of North Main Street waiting to turn into the El Capri Motel parking lot.

Police said Baugher was trapped inside the wreckage for 30 minutes before he could be freed by members of the Sikeston Volunteer Rescue Squad. His car slid partially under the bed of the truck.

A fire truck was called to hose down spilled gasoline around the wreckage.

55 die in air crash

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A Lufthansa jumbo jetliner crashed and burned today on take off from Nairobi airport and at least 55 persons were reported dead. The airline said 96 persons survived the first fatal crash of a Boeing 747, three-fourths of them virtually uninjured.

The West German airline's Nairobi manager, Helmuth Wolff, said 55 of the 157 persons aboard were known dead and six were missing. He said 73 persons from the flight were at a Nairobi hotel unhurt. The other survivors were in Nairobi hospitals.

Commission postpones flood insurance decision

The Planning and Zoning Commission postponed making any recommendations on the future of federally subsidized low cost flood insurance in the city, although it was made clear at the Tuesday night meeting that Sikeston would be forced to join the program.

Attending the meeting were a number of Sikeston bankers and realtors and two representatives from the Kansas City office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Ben Stephenson and Gary McClure.

The federal program requires that flood insurance be purchased by anyone taking out a federally backed loan for building or buying a house in a flood prone area.

In order to qualify for the insurance, the builder of a new house in flood areas of Sikeston would have to raise the level of the house by three feet, and in some cases by five feet. In a few areas, the house might have to be built even higher.

Industrial and commercial buildings built in the area would have to be flood-proofed to the flood level.

The flood prone areas discussed are those subject to flooding on a 100- year basis according to government statistics.

Those areas are mostly located east of Ingram Street.

The city first indicated it was interested in flood insurance in 1971 and asked the government to do a study showing the areas of the city subject to the 100- year flood level.

Commerce woman cheated by con men

BENTON — The Scott County sheriff's department and Cape Girardeau County officials are conducting a joint investigation of a confidence game in which an elderly Commerce woman was cheated out of about $3,500 over a three-month period, Scott County Sheriff John Dennis said today.

The game is an old one. Dennis explained that a man approached the woman and tried to convince her that several odd jobs needed to be done -- such as installation or repair of a lightning rod and extermination of termites. The confidence man first quoted a small fee for the job,, then demanded a lot more, saying it was a bigger job than expected.

Many times such jobs are not necessary at all, stated Dennis, who said the investigation found a point where the confidence man cut the wire leading from the lightning rod to the ground, then told the victim the lightning rod was broken.

Dennis said the same method of operation has been used in reported attempts to con people in

Officials see future housing level

City officials Tuesday showed representatives from the Department of Housing and Urban Development how high houses would have to be built on Crowe Place in order to qualify for federal flood insurance. The stake (inside box) indicates that the height of the first floor of any house built on the property would have to be about two feet above the ground. Viewing the height of the stake, from left, are Bill Whitlock, assistant city manager; Gary McClure of Kansas City, HUD representative; and City Manager Charles Church. (Daily standard photo)

FOILING TOO NOSEY SHOPPERS

Ever bring home a jar of jelly or baby foot from the store only to discover that some other shopper had "inspected" it, maybe even sampled it?

That kind of experience will be a thing of the past thanks to one of those perfectly simple inventions that become so obvious once we see them.

Dairy Cap Corp. of Jamaica, N.Y., has brought out a devide it claims makes standard metal or plastic screw-on caps for bottles and jars tamper proof.

The device, called "Protecto-Cap," is a plastic ring which snaps on over the conventional screw cap. Since it is impossible to turn the screw cap with the ring on it (the ring slips), the overcap provides visual proof that the undercap has not been removed. To open a jar or bottle with a screw cap, a consumer must first remove the overcap by stripping away a molded pull tap.

The Protecto-Cap won't, of course, stop people from opening jars in stores if they want to. But it will prevent others from unwittingly purchasing a product that somebody else has stuck his finger or nose into.

THE CBS COVERUP
Part II of a series

Accusations that the television media has been "slanting the news" are not new. Hundreds of complaints have been made and many books and articles have cited abuses (The News Twisters, by Edith Efron; News From Nowhere, by Edward J. Epstein, and others). Now, however, the two-year study in depth made by the Institute for American Strategy has resulted in a 209-page report which more than confirms the worst fears of television news critics.

Professor Whittle Johnston of the Department of Government, University of Virginia, said of the report: "TV and National Defense is a straightforward analysis of an issue that should concern all Americans. It shows not only what events CBS News thought it important to report, but — of even greater significance — those events CBS failed to report."

In other words, the findings were that CBS did not simply "slant" the news; more than that, CBS covered up those news stories which did not fit its pre-conceived ideas of what a news story ought to tell. Forgotten, apparently, was the public's right to hear a full spectrum of opinion on the vital subject of national defense.

For example, relative to news of the Vietnam War, the scholars who directed the study for the Institute for American Strategy examined the amount of time and attention CBS gave to three viewpoints concerning the war. Viewpoint A: That the U.S. should take the war to the enemy, that the South Vietnamese government was sufficiently responsive, enjoyed fairly broad popular support, and merited strong U. S. assistance; that the North Vietnamese government is dictatorial, repressive, and seeks to conquer South Vietnam and breaks international agreements.

Viewpoint B was essentially the Administration's position, namely, that the U.S. should withdraw its manpower but help Saigon logistically to assume the responsibility for the fighting; and that the U.S. should rely on diplomatic pressure to insure that the North Vietnamese government keep its treaty commitments.

Viewpoint C, on the other hand, held that the U.S. should withdraw as fast as possible regardless of the effect on South Vietnam; that the South Vietnamese government was corrupt, repressive, dictatorial, and unworthy of U.S. aid; and that the North Vietnamese Government, while dictatorial, was fighting a just war to unite the Vietnamese people and could be expected to keep international agreements.

The Institute study team found that in 1972, CBS Evening News televised 1,719 sentences relative to Vietnam, and that of these, the ratio of Viewpoint C against Viewpoint A was 48 to one. Of these 1,719 sentences, 1,280 could be identified by the name of the source. For example, 15 Administration spokesmen expressed 250 viewpoints, all of them in the "B" classification. Thirty-nine Congressional sources expressed 48 "B" viewpoints, 218 "C" viewpoints, but none were quoted with an "A" viewpoint. The score with CBS newsmen themselves was even more lopsided. Their sixteen spokesmen expressed "C" viewpoints, 11 "B" (or Administration) viewpoints, but only one "A" viewpoint.

Sixty other Americans, including ten activists, were quoted in 290 CBS News sentences. Of these sixty, only one — Governor George Wallace of Alabama — expressed an "A" viewpoint. Of the others, CBS televised 220 "C" viewpoints by such individuals as Father Daniel Berrigan, Ramsey Clark, Rennie Davis, David Dellinger, Daniel Ellsberg, Jane Fonda, Clark Clifford, David Livingston, Sargent Shriver, George Wald, and others.

Thousands of reputable Americans, many of them outstanding authorities in their own right and certainly of newsworthy attention, held viewpoint "A", and could see no advantage for America in either a military stalemate or diplomatic appeasement. Why is it that in an entire year of CBS evening newscasting, only one person was allowed by CBS News to express that viewpoint; Why were all others suppressed;

This is a question that demands an answer, and the answer must come from the one man most responsible, CBS News President Richard Salant.

NAM STRESSING 3 PRIORITIES ON ENVIRONMENT

Three major issues need solution in the environmental field, Daniel W. Cannon, National Association of Manufacturers' director of environmental affairs told environmental executives in Los Angeles.

The first issue relates to the restrictions on the sulphur content of fuels. The Environmental Protection Agency has stated that "in some quarters the shift from high to low sulphur content fuel is considered to be a major factor in the energy crisis that we face today and over the next decade."

The EPA is working with the states to relax their restrictions, but Mr. Cannon asserts that Congress should amend the Clean Air Act to make sure that sulphur restrictions are in accord with the present energy situation.

The second issue arises out of the "non-degradation" court decision that there can be no significant deterioration of air quality under the Clean Air Act even though national standards are not violated, he said.

This decision would prevent growth in population, commercial development, industrialization and power generation in many areas.

The third issue, Mr. Cannon said, relates to the National Environmental Policy Act which has been used to block or delay many energy development projects such as the Trans-Alaska Pipeline, nuclear power plant operation and oil and gas leasing on the outer continental shelf. Congress should amend the NEPA to make the Council on Environmental Quality the judge of the adequacy of these statements rather than the federal courts, he concluded.

Students Counsel Small Business In SBA Program

This is the third year that small businessmen who have received assistance from the U.S. Small Business Administration has also received management advice from senior and graduate students at 150 schools of business administration.

According to all concerned, everyone has benefited. The troubled businesses have received advice in recordkeeping, accounting procedures, advertising, and sales promotion. The students benefit from the practical experience. And the Small Business Administration benefits by preventing defaults on the loans which it has made.

The SBA calls the program a good example of private sector involvement with government. Moreover, the program has influenced 53 per cent of participating students toward small business ownership and management.

NATURAL DISASTERS LEAVE LASTING SCARS

On April 3, 1974, what may have been the largest storm of its kind ever observed on earth struck Xenia, Ohio.

In two minutes, almost half the seven-square-mile town was destroyed by winds clocked at 318 miles an hour. Twenty-five people were killed quickly; seven others died later in hospitals. About 2,500 were injured.

The physical damage left in the wake of this monster tornado will eventually be erased. The ravages it left in the minds of the survivors may never be.

Even though the majority of the residents of Xenia were unharmed, most even with their property intact, no one completely escaped the effects of the tornado, writes Don A. Schanche in Today's Health magazine.

"Such natural disasters seem invariably to suck an emotional storm in their wake that frequently cuts a wider swath than the disaster itself," he writes. "In this psychological aftermath, the nonvictims often suffer as much, if not more, than the direct victims of the tragedy."

According to Ann S. Kliman, a psychologist and disaster expert who was called to Xenia after the storm to consult with local mental health authorities, direct victims usually respond to a disaster by an increase in anxiety reactions, such as fear of another disaster, feelings of being overwhelmed, feelings of depression and rage and inability to cope, or frenetic coping activity.

Indirect victims often respond by feeling conscious guilt — guilt that they escaped when others didn't — and by an increase in guilt-related and stress- induced physical symptoms, accidents and explosive arguments at home, in school or on the job.

It may be years before the full extent of post-tornado reactions unfolds in Xenia, says Schanche.

A similar story is told about another sudden disaster — the collapse of a coal mine dam and the flooding of communities along 20 miles of Buffalo Creek in West Virginia in February, 1972.

A major psychiatric study conducted by 60 psychiatrists, psychologists and social case workers from the University of Cincinnati found "serious psychological impairment" in nearly every survivor.

The study helped bring about a recent landmark financial settlement to survivors by the Buffalo Mining Company, at $13.5 million the largest ever granted by a court for psychological damages.

"Our findings," says UFC psychiatrist Dr. James L. Titchener, "were that the disaster had acute effects, causing much anxiety and fear with sleep disturbances and physiological disorder, shock and grief reactions, disorganization of thinking and behavior."

Wen they came to the area two years after the disaster, the investigators found continuing anxiety focussing on nights when there is rain or stormy conditions. As in Xenia, the survivors felt guilt and shame about their survival. And also as in Xenia, there had been a terrific impact on the children, both those who witnessed the disaster and those observing the effects of it on their parents.

The psychological trauma for most of the Buffalo Creek survivors is becoming entrenched as time passes, rather than lessening, says Titchener.

For all our boasting about our "conquest" of nature, it would seem that we modern human beings are as much at the mercy of elemental forces as were our primitive ancestors, who had far less understanding of or control over them.

ESSENTIAL TO NATIONAL STABILITY

Foreign trade, at one time merely a couple of words in the dictionary to a lot of people, is now a matter of prime interest to everyone. Nearly everyone now realizes that if the U. S. is to remain a prosperous nation, it must also remain competitive in world markets.

The need to stimulate U. S. participation in international commerce was one of the compelling reasons for adoption by Congress of a 10-year program to revitalize the U. S. Merchant Marine -- not only with new-technology cargo vessels, but with a strengthened fleet of tankers to meet growing demands for the movement of petroleum. As never before, tankers are a vital tool of the energy industry which must import increased amounts of petroleum to supplement domestic supplies. As the chairman of the Federal Maritime Commission has said: "... We are going to be using more oil all the time -- from Alaska -- from overseas. It just makes sense for our country to be independent of foreign- registered ships for our oil and gas." The same can be said for the other element of the U. S. Merchant Marine -- the cargo ships of new design and low-cost operation. They are becoming an integral part of a worldwide, intermodular transportation system -- a system that should guarantee American maritime leadership and the means of reaching global market.

No matter what other measures are taken to assure economic stability, none is more important than a U. S. merchant fleet second to none -- a fleet that includes the cargo vessels and tankers are that the keys to the Earth's storehouse of goods and resources.

AN ACADEMIC ARGUMENT

Cost of promotion and advertising has long been a target of shortsighted theorists who conclude that every dime spent by a merchant to attract customers is a dime taken out of the pockets of consumers. They accept the fact of America's magnificent retail, mass distribution system, but never analyze how it came into being and what is necessary to sustain it. The truth is that a retail store is something like a family auto. It takes energy to keep it going. In the case of the retailer that energy is supplied by competent management, and promotion and advertising.

The endless argument over the cost of promotion is, in reality, academic. Numerous surveys of the trading stamp industry have shown pretty conclusively that this particular form of promotion has little or no measurable effect on prices. As to the question of whether trading stamps provide "something instead of nothing" for consumers, a report in the Journal of Retailing, published by New York University Institute of Retail Management, on "The Value of Trading Stamps as Measured by Retail Prices, "is illuminating. It finds that in Denver, Colorado-- a representative U.S. city-- a book of trading stamps of a more or less typical trading stamp concern is worth an average of $3.11, in terms of the retail price of goods at the trading stamp company's redemption center. This bears out the oft repeated statement that, on the average, for every dollar merchants spend on trading stamps, customers get redemption merchandise with a retail value of $1.10.

Quite literally, consumers who receive trading stamps are getting something instead of nothing. Were it not for forms of promotion, such as trading stamps and the advertising that fuels the mass movement of goods at minimum prices, the retail distribution system, as we know it, would gradually grind to a halt-- like a car running out of gas.

CHEAP SCALP JOB

AN ARDENT LOVER, paying court to a beautiful blonde, cornered his girl friend's young brother. "Billy," he said, "how'd you like to earn a dollar?"

"Sure! What do I have to do for it?"

Explained the suitor, "I'll give you a dollar for one lock of your sister's beautiful hair."

"You must be some kind of a nut," said Billy. "Give me ten bucks and I'll get you the whole wig."

"CAN YOU HEAR THE MUSIC?"

A NUMBER of years ago, Thomas Dreier, philosopher and writer, penned a little story about Christmas that has become a classic. There is inspiration and deep truth in it for these times and all times. Here is the story:

The parents had taken their little boy with them on a Christmas shopping tour. As they were about to enter the swinging door of a big department store the little boy stopped and said, "Oh, listen to the music!"

His parents listened. They heard no music. All they heard was the honking of the automobiles and the roar of their engines, the sound of thousands of shoes scraping the sidewalk, the loud talk of men and women, the swish of the doors as they turned, and the raucous city noises.

But the little boy repeated, "Listen! Can't you hear the beautiful music?"

And the parents, trying with all their might, kept the rattle and roar and racket out of their ears, and suddenly, as if by some magic, they heard the sound of little silver bells tinkling. Looking up, they saw the toy bells above the doorway of the store. Once heard, the little bells seemed to become as loud as cathedral chimes.

In these days of change, unrest, and insecurity, too many of us fail to hear the tiny silver bells of the things that are unchanging and secure. There are truths that seek to find their way into our minds and hearts. We shut them out by listening only to the clamor of what is temporary. We fail to hear the real music.

An old lady of seventy, returning after sixty years' absence to her native Scottish village, called on a friend of her youth, now over ninety.

YOU HAVEN'T anything to worry about," a veteran air traveler told his friend, who was making his first airplane trip. "If your time has come, you can't do anything about it."

"That's all right," replied the novice, "but what bothers me is suppose the pilot's time has come, and mine hasn't!" What happens then?"

"I'm afraid your little brother is shy," said the hostess at a birthday party. "He hasn't moved from that one place all afternoon."

"No, ma'am," explained the boy's elder sister, "he's not shy. It's just that he's never had a necktie on before, and he thinks he's tied to something."

A man hired a boat and fishing guide for a float trip down the river. As they were drifting along, the man noticed a large fire extinguisher in the boat, so he asked the guide, "What's this for?"

"Be careful," warned the guide. "This is a wooden boat and when we drift around the next bend there is a fish so big that if you hook him, he will take us back upstream so fast it may set the bottom of the boat on fire! That's what the extinguisher is for!"

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

The Human Side

WASHINGTON--Behind the dull statistics, which measure our deepening economic distress, is a poingant human drama. We have conducted our own economic survey to get the human side of the story.

We have sent reporters into the nation's most fashionable neighborhoods and its most scrubby ghettos. We have spoken to the gentle folks on Sen. James Eastland's plantation in Sunflower County, Miss. And we have talked to their impoverished neighbors, who sit on creaking porches dull eyes and gnawing hunger pains. And we have made spot chekcs on economic conditions across America.

Everywhere, people are complaining about hard times. New York brokers, despairing over the stock market slump are pulling out of their houses and heading South. They hope to find better financial opportunities in Atlanta and Houston.

Ghetto blacks, reversing the previous flow, are also drifting southward. Their families had tended the fields in the Deep South since slaves days. Then, suddenly, they were made obsolete by tractors and automatic cotton-pickers. Many them moved northward to fill up the ghettos of the big cities. They now find life in the ghettos so bleak, so bitter, that those who can scrape up the bus fare are heading back home.

Probably the worst off are the migrant farm laborers, the thousands of faceless men and women and their anonymous children who move with the harvest, stopping only long enough to pick a crop and to earn enough to subsist until the next stop.

The average stoop laborer, according to United Farm Workers official Gilbert Padilla, earns a meager $3,000 a year. For these wandering workers, who move from crop to crop in beat-up trucks, the gasoline price rise has been a disaster.

Even more serious has been the increase in the price of beans from 18 to 69 cents a pound. Many migrant workers, who help make America the best fed nation nation in history, are themselves undernourished. Some are too poor to afford even the government stamps to buy cut-price food, and exist on a diet of starches and water.

Some have settled in California's Sunkist country, where life is a bit better. They live in grower-owned mobile trailers and wooden houses on the edges of the groves.

The ranchers like to keep their stoop workers stooped and submissive. As one technique for keeping them down on the farm at the prevailing wages, the landowners welcome peddlers driving station wagons piled with tacky merchandise. The credit sales help hold the laborers in financial bondage.

Not far from this poverty, growers live in baronial splendor, with poolside parties, skeet shooting and social soirees. But if the tinkling of highball glasses can be heard in their fine houses, there is also much grumbling and grousing. One of the managers of the magnificent Limoneira Ranch complained to us that the orange harvest was off 25 per cent, labor costs are up 15 per cent and profits are down 50 per cent.

On the 5,800 acres of Sen. James Eastland's plantation outside Doddsville, Miss., there is also deepening gloom. "We've had a lot of heavy rains," one of the senator's womenfolk complained to my associate George Clifford. And when the bolls get sodden, she averred, you can't pick much cotton.

"The heavy machinery we're using now can't get on the fields do the picking she said. "Several of the other counties around here have been designated as natural disaster areas, but I don't believe Sunflower County has qualified."

If the county should qualify for federal emergency funds, it won't be the first time Sen. Eastland has collected from the government for not being able to harvest. In recent years, he has stashed away hundreds of thousands of dollars from Washington in price supports for cotton he did not plant. The money was a fringe benefit from the laws he helped to write as the single most powerful man in the Senate.

Others living on the black soil of the delta, however, measure their government handouts in tens and twenties, not hundreds of thousands. They are the sharecroppers and the farm hands, who eke out a living running the machinery in the cotton fields. The most they can earn, when they can find work, is $2 an hour. "I haven't heard of none that are getting higher," one of the senator's less-blessed neighbors told us.

Doctors at Mt. Bayou hospital, not far from Eastland's plantation, told us that despite the federal food stamp program, they still treat "a lot of cases of malnutrition."

"Every day," said one doctor, "I see people who have no health insurance and no medicaid. And they have no food, either."

Not even the sugar growers, whose prices for raw sugar have shot up from 4.5 cents a pound three years ago to 67.2 cents a pound today, are happy.

George Wedgworth, head of the Sugar Cane Growers Cooperative, representing about 150 farms between the southern edge of Lake Okeechobee and the Everglades in southern Florida, grumbled about government controls. "Consumers are going to have to pay more," he said.

Some 8,000 workers have been imported from the West Indies for the back-breaking harvest, which is just beginning. American agricultural workers won't hack down the sugar cane with heavy machetes for the minimum $2.45 an hour. "You and I probably wouldn't last a day." Wedgworth said. "But those accustomed to it prefer being here to working in the West Indies."

In sum, the economic downturn isn't merely a question of dollars. It is an issue of human misery.

H.L. Hunt

If Communists could produce

The World Food Conference at Rome is yielding the usual fruits of such political conferences aimed at solving economic bickering and inaction. The capitalist farmers in the world are the only ones who can produce a surplus. That means the United States, Canada, and Australia; yet the farmers of these three nations are having taken from them and are giving up -- more of their freedom as enterprisers all the time.

If the communists could produce, they would be on the attack with a well-organized information program explaining to the world how the communist system is the only one which can feed its people, and all the world needs to do is to adopt communism and stop being hungry.

The fact is, of course, that the communist system cannot and never has produced enough to feed its people. Every communist-socialist nation, even those like Russia which once had agricultural surpluses, eventually finds itself unable to feed its own people, much less rescue the starving in other lands.

The United States should be on the offensive at the World Food Conference, not apologetic. We should be emphasizing that it is socialism and collectivism which are starving people, not capitalism. Capitalism feeds people. The whole world, including many non-producing intellectuals and bureaucrats in our own land, seems intent on destroying the personal enterprise, profitable profitmotive system which has fed so many while most of the world starves under anti-capitalist systems. The situation defies all reason. HLH

Big Wall

The Great Pyramid built by Khufu (Cheops) ca. 2550 B.C. was built on a square base, with an area of 13 acres, or seven average-sized city blocks. The six million tons of material used in the construction would, as Napoleon figured in 1798, be enough to build a 10-foot wall around the whole of France. Cut into standard-sized bricks and laid end-to-end, the Great Pyramid would reach from the earth to the moon.

Gillyflower used for medicine

This Thanksgiving, as people decorate tables and homes with flowers and fruits in anticipation of a happy family dinner, those flowers hold reminder that there are many reasons to be thankful for a land that remains beautiful in spite of pollution, and bountiful in spite of inflation.

The pilgrims had little sugar with which to sweeten the tart wild berries they gathered during the early years while taming the wilderness. And their gardens were planted not for pleasure but for ingredients urgently needed for medicine, flavorings, dyes for hand-woven cloth, and even insect repellents.

Many plants that the early colonists brought from the old world in seed or root form have become favorite flowers today, according to the Society of American Florists.

For example, the "clove gillyflower" used for many medicinal purposes by colonial dames is today's carnation. And although the carnation that florists carry today has developed into a handsome, manypetaled flower, it still retains the spicy fragrance that perfumed the colonial homemaker's garden.

Another flower that links today with the Pilgrims is the "everlasting" — a flower the colonial ladies picked, hung to dry in a dark corner, and used in the home to protect precious hand-woven clothing and blankets from moths. Later, when the early rigors of settling the land were over, colonial ladies used "everlastings" in bouquets of dried flowers and leaves to add color and decoration to their homes in winter.

Today, "everlastings" are used in much the same way — for their beauty and form, and for their pleasing reminder, when nature lies dormant, that each season has its turn and the barren fields will soon be renewed with the bright flowers of spring.

So as flowers and fruits are placed upon Thanksgiving tables, people need not wonder whether a colonial Elizabeth or Matilda, far from her birthland and family, once gave a sigh of thanks for the pleasing color and fragrance of her "gillyflowers" and "everlastings" as well as for their practical value.

Tips for buying sewing machines

Area Textiles and Clothing Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Over 50 million people are doing home sewing, and this figure will probably increase according to United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) statistics.

This number includes many home sewers who are planning on purchasing a new sewing machine. Selecting a sewing machine that will be useful as a long time investment is a very important consideration.

No one can tell a person which machine to buy, but here are some suggestions to help you in making this decision.

For the novice it is important to know the four main categories of sewing machines from which to choose: straight stitch basic zigzag, more versatile zigzag, and most versatile zigzag. The choice of machine will depend upon what use one intends to make of it. Complicated machines with features that are not going to be used can prove to be a poor purchase.

Another choice to consider when buying a machine is whether it will be a cabinet model or portable. Where a person plans to sew will help in making this decision.

When shopping try out the machine for good operation, check both the flat bed and open arm models. A feature of the open arm is that it allows for slipping tubular parts of garments such as sleeves, pants legs or cuffs to be pulled over the arm in order to sew them more easily.

Few inventions have proven as valuable to the world as the sewing machine. Regardless of the decision, do not buy a machine on impulse. It is wise to be informed and buy from a reputable dealer.

Illicit sex shatters lives of students

Dear Ann Landers: Where are all those advocates of prenarital sex when it comes time to pick up the pieces after a "momentary mistake"? And what do the advocates do to help prevent such "mistakes"?

Do they tell the kids that though a relationship may be "meaningful" too one partner it may be purely self-satisfiction, an ego trip, or mere condescension on the part of the other?

Do they tell the kids that a "meaningful relationship" may be so meaningful that one partner may have an overwhelming desire to cement that relationship with a child?

Do they tell the kids they should NEVER count on the other person to take precautions--and that to be perfectly safe, both parties should count on themselves?

Do they tell the kids that a girl's most intense desires are very likely to accompany her most fertile time? ("Just this once?")

Do they tell the kids that a person't "love" might be severely dampened by resentment and turn to full-fledged hate should that person feel trapped?

Do they tell the kids that alternative solutions to an unwanted pregnancy are vastly more difficult to handle than coping with the challenges of virginity?

Do they tell the kids that the legality of abortion is insignificant compared to the emotional trauma?

Do they tell the kids that giving up a child for adoption is no simple matter for anyone who has had a "meaningful relationship"?

Do they tell the girls that an out-of-wedlock baby goes far beyond the enjoyment of having a cute little bundle of joy to cuddle and take for a stroll in the perambulator?

Where are those advocates of premarital sex when it's time to mend lives suffering from their advice?--A Shoulder To Cry On

Dear Shoulder: Thank you for a good letter. I'm glad you offered your shoulder to "cry on." Mine is already the wettest in the U.S.A. (Are you listening, students?)

Dear Ann Landers: We came to the United States from the Netherlands a year ago and like it very much. There are two things about your country we cannot understand.

A company that sells fried chicken advertises that it is "finger-lickin' good." In our country, children learn table manners. Licking the fingers is considered vulgar. We do not want our children to imitate this custom. What should we tell them?

The second thing is the way your clergymen run to the front door of the church after the worship service and sermon to collect compliments. They shake hands with all who leave and revel in the high praise of their sermon. This is completely foreign to us and we would like to avoid it. How? "NewAmericans

Dear New: In America it is considered O.K. to eat crisp fried chicken with the hands. If you don't want your children to lick their fingers, tell them to use silverware.

In some churches it is customary for the clergyman to shake hands with the members of his congregation after the service. If this bothers you, take another exit or find another church.

Local girl is student in Kansas

PITTSBURG, Kan. — Nancy Louise Gleason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Gleason, 311 Salcedo Road, Sikeston, Mo., is among 5,409 students from 529 towns in 43 states and 15 foreign countries who have enrolled for the fall semester at Kansas State College of Pittsburg.

The largest representation, totaling 1,295 students, is from the college's home community of Pittsburg and nearby Frontenac. The Kansas City area has the largest representation outside of Pittsburg with a total of 450 students.

A total of 4,774 KSCP students are from a total of 272 towns in Kansas, with 307 from 78 towns in Missouri, 84 from 24 towns in Oklahoma and 171 from 155 towns in 40 other states. Also, 73 students are from 37 town in 15 foreign countries.

Iran leads international students representation at KSCP with 29 enrollees followed by Taiwan with 15 and Thailand with 10. Other countries represented are Canada, Rhodesia, Japan, Pakistan, Hong Kong, India, Sierra Leone, Malaysia, and Nigeria, Germany, Puerto Rico, and Saudia Arabia.

Risco mother throws party for children

RISCO — Mrs. Luther Stokes entertained Nov. 16 with a birthday parety at her home in honor of her children, Telisha and Charles Richard.

Multicolored balloons and happy birthday crepe paper were used in the decorating scheme.

Cake, punch and ice cream were served to the honorees and following guests: Mrs. Barrett Stokes and children and Mrs. Agnes Mertel of Malden, Doris Pearson and Kim and Richard, of Campbell, and Mrs. Donnie Lancaster and Carol and Dana of Risco.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Well, they finally got the buzz out of seat belts.

It took an act of Congress to do it, but at last people will be able to get into their cars and start them without red lights flashing, alarms going off and someone at your elbow snipping, "Well, it's not me, Phyllis, and you're the only other person in the front seat!"

The seat belt alarm system did for marriage what Jane Fonda did for the VFW. That harmless little electronic belch has left in its wake scores of damaged marriages. And it isn't over yet.

As I said to my husband the other day as I crawled into the car, "Something is wrong with my seat. It feels funny."

"That's because you are not sitting on top of your seat belt like you usually do."

"That's not true. I only did that a couple of times."

"Then why can't you wear a bathing suit without embarrassing strap marks?"

"That's easy for you to say," I snapped. "You're used to being restrained. I'm not!"

"What do you mean by a crack like that? After all, I think you should be happy that someone had some consideration for your safety."

"So how come you had them disconnected?"

"Because you became hysterical when you tried to jump out of the car for an errand and cut your dress in half."

"I wasn't hysterical. Just stunned for a moment. If you loved me you wouldn't have taken the buzz out of the seat belts."

"How did you come to that conclusion?"

"Stiller and Meara. They're a comedy team who did a commercial for seat belts. He said he buckled her up because it was a subtle way of telling her he loved her.

"You told me seat belt buzzers were as subtle as a fist coming out of the glove compartment and punching you in the mouth."

"That's before I knew you really didn't care what happened to me. All these years you've just pretended to like my meat loaf."

"What's meat loaf got to do with anything?"

"It has as much to do with anything as your mother wearing a navy blue dress to the wedding."

"So buckle up if you want to. You're over 21."

"Here it comes ... the 'She's-27-days-older-then-I-am-number.'"

"That settles it. Tomorrow I hook up the seat belt buzzer."

"You don't care what I look like in a bathing suit!" I sulked.

Attending from the Tallapoosa Baptist Church were Mrs. Gene Lancaster, Mrs. J. H. Meese, Mrs. Nancy Marlowe, Mrs. Bob Meese and Mrs. Hugh Landers of Risco.

Meetings

TUESDAY

Chapter JU of PEO will meet at 1:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Bill Burch, 658 N. Ranney St.

TUESDAY

The First United Methodist Church bazaar will begin at 9 a.m. in the church fellowship hall. A luncheon will be served from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The boss may think a fellow works late when he only stays at the office because he needs some stamps.

Some women are so contrary they often have ideas of their own.

Women first to use soap,water

MAN'S FIRST DEFENSE

MELROSE PARK, Ill.-- Man may have survived his first 20 million years on earth because he smelled too bad to eat. According to anthropologists, most predatory animals were repelled by his body odor.

It's likely women were the first to take steps against human odor, so they started washing with a substance made from wood ashes and animal fat-- primitive soap-- to deodorize themselves and their loved ones.

Soap- and- water made a comeback during the Industrial Revolution. Then 100 years ago science came up with an effective underarm deodorant, and in 1966 the first feminine hygiene spray was introduced in the United States. Such aids are needed, researchers have found, because without them body odor begins to develop about six hours after bathing.

Salt has a very agreeable taste if a stein of beer is added to half a teaspoonful.

If you are lonely and want some neighbors to call, just start to take a bath.

Martini meals create malnourished husbands

By DR. L.M. HURSH
National Dairy Council Consultant

Has it been long since you asked your husband what he had to eat? Either at a local restaurant, or out of town? It's true, you know, that many men in business get almost as much of their nourishment away from home as at the family table.

We all worry about our children — and whether they get enough to eat. We may not worry enough about just what foods our children are consuming. But do wives, unless their husbands are on reducing diets, know what their spouses eat when they eat out?

As a doctor I suspect we don't know a great deal about what individual men eat. And if you ask them, a lot of men may not remember from day to day what they had either. But observing people in restaurants suggest there may be a lot of meat, potatoes and martini meals. And coffee, of course.

This is not, if true, as it should be.

I have the feeling that most men will get enough calories, whatever they do. So we probably don't have to worry about whether your husband gets enough for energy. The real concern has to be for his not getting too many calories. But at the same time, he must get the nutrients he needs.

Malnutrition, whether by way of gaining too much weight or creating nutrient deficiencies over the long term, is a very subtle thing. It is almost a secret thing. An illness can be triggered by undernourishment. But in looking back, even an illness may not reveal that poor eating habits were a contributing factor.

So we have to approach nutrition on a positive note. If faithfully practiced, sound eating habits will reward you by helping you achieve maximum health. If disease does strike, good nutrition will have you in stronger shape to overcome the illness.

Thus, good nutrition has a lot going for it.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Wooden shakers won't clean up

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — My wooden salt and pepper shakers are so sticky. I have tried using all-purpose cleaners, soap and water and furniture polish but they are still sticky. What can I do? — MRS.H.J.W.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns coffee. The coffee companies could put out hand grinders and packaged coffee beans to help rid the environment of those millions of coffee cans that are discarded. I have an electric coffee mill but try and buy coffee beans. When you can they are sold at a premium because they are so scarce. Freshly ground coffee is superior to that in a can. Packaged seems to lose its aroma before a can is used. Thanks for listening and for the Pointers that have certainly enriched my life. — MRS.A.F.B.

DEAR POLLY — I have help for M.H.S. whose refrigerator shelves have rusted. Sandpaper the rust off thoroughly and then spray paint them with a rustproof paint. This works wonders. I would advise doing this painting outdoors. I find rustproof paint quite offensive. There also is no mess to clean up indoors. — E.C.B.

DEAR POLLY — and M.H.S. — I have a couple of suggestions for those rusted refrigerator shelves. Clean the rust off well and then spray with regular refrigerator odor free paint.

Plastic lace can be purchased at so-called dime and variety stores in the desired width and length and be used to cover such shelves. This looks pretty. Select an open pattern and it will not impair the air circulation in the refrigerator. I also like using it on the shelves since it prevents small containers from tipping in the refrigerator. — MRS.L.E.

DEAR POLLY — Cardboard cylinders from waxed paper and paper towels make excellent mailing tubes for newspapers, magazines and other small things. Just write the address on the cylinder. — BETH.

DEAR POLLY — I do hope a man can invade a woman's world momentarily. The ladies have had discussions about "lime" deposits on their dish drainers. I am unable to determine that such deposits are really lime and think it is more likely a soap or detergent residue. I use an ordinary bathroom spray cleaner on mine, brush it lightly with a vegetable brush to get in the crevices and remove all traces of this residue. Occasionally I then apply a little spray wax and my drainer looks as good as the day I walked in the door with it three years ago. — PAUL B.

Emphasis on 'service' at Tidwell's station

By ALICE JACKSON

For Melvin Tidwell, having his one successful business means working 13 hour days, six days a week. At Tidwell's Service Station, 621 N. Main St., Sikeston, the emphasis is on 'Service'.

"The services we have for customers are more than filling a car's gas tank, though many people still refer to us as a 'filling' station.

"I have two full-time employes and we make emergency service calls. In the station we adjust brakes, mufflers, tires, wash and wax. I usually do the tune-ups. All of us work at whatever jobs are to be done".

Tidwell has owned a service station for 14 years. Keeping good employes is important. Family men make the best workers, he has found. He's also had students from the Sikeston Area Vocational School who were well trained.

"Naturally, no one will take care of your business like you can. I've had maybe six or seven days off in the last eight years. My employes get a paid vacation. I haven't felt I could take off; the customers expect good service and I want to be here to see they get it".

Mrs. Nancy Tidwell is important to her husband's business. She keeps the daily records: gas and oil sold, parts to be ordered, credit card information, the required state and federal information up-to-date. This is in addition to her full-time job at Scott County's Division of Family Services. "The paper work for the station is enormous - sometimes I don't believe it!", she laughed.

The availability of gas and the fluctuation in prices the past year has brought complaints.

"When the major company whose products I sold pulled out of Missouri and I couldn't honor their credit card any more, I lost some customers. Most of my business is in service, though, and our regular customers have been great. They have stayed with me through things like the shortages, pump break-downs, and I really appreciate them. Anyone who comes into the station I consider my customer, and the customer's trust is my living".

Underwriters to meet

The Sikeston UNIT OF THE Missouri Association of Life Underwriters will meet at 11:45 a.m. Thursday at the Grecian Steakhouse.

A special program will be presented by T. Ronald Hahs, district agent for Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Cape Girardeau. His topic is "There is no time like the present." Hahs will discuss life underwriters' new opportunities with the new Federal Pension Reform Act of 1974 and how inflation gives a new mandate in society.

The local association is made up of 40 career life and health insurance underwriters of the Sikeston area who meet the third Thursday of the month. They are basically family insurance conselors who are very much in demand to help Americans keep current with personal insurance needs. The association stresses education and training to keep with the new theme of the National Association of Life Underwriters, "America's 900,000 life and health insurance people ... what we do makes a difference."

Local members are available for information and educational discussions before school and civic groups upon request. For further information, contact the local public relations director, Dwayne C. Lorenz, Chartered Life Underwriter, at 220 N. Main St. in Sikeston.

Any career life insurance agent is invited to visit the monthly meetings or contact Lorenz for more information.

System is success

NORFOLK, Va. — Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. has announced that their EconoDations nationwide toll-free advance reservation system is a success.

In the first 60 day the system was operational, over 12,000 calls were received. Calls received in October showed a 36 per cent increase over calls received in September. Econo-Travel's toll-free number is 1-800-446-6900.

Lloyd Tarbutton, president of Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp., noted, "We are receiving a much larger response than anticipated. The sharp increase in the second month of operation shows how much the public wants this type advance reservation service." Tarbutton went on to say that many Econo-Travel motels have already enjoyed full capacity nights thanks to EconoDations.

Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp., headquartered in Norfolk, Va., is the third largest budget motel chain in the United States, with over 110 motels in operation or under construction. Licenses have been issued for motels in nearly 600 locations in 37 states.

There is an Econo-Travel Motor Hotel in Sikeston, Mo., located at the intersection of Interstate 55 and U. S. Highway 62. Local reservations may be made by calling 471-7400.

250 attend MFA meeting

Approximately 250 persons attended the 1974 annual meeting of the Sikeston MFA Oil Co. Bulk Plant held recently at the Security Federal Saving and Loan Assn. community room 820 N. Main.

Dick Curp, MFA Oil Co. district manager, presented a brief report on the company's 1974 business. Sales were reported at $72 million for the past fiscal year, with net earnings of $4.6 million for the same period.

Ten area men were elected to serve as delegates and alternates for the coming year.

Selected from Sikeston were Arnold Stone, 428 Daniels St., Dempsey Gardner Jr., 802 Taylor St. Frank Stanley Box 297; James Pobst of Route One; Don Schuchart of Route One; C. C. Scott Jr. of Route Three; and Jerry Vann of Route Three.

Other delegates selected were Ben F. Marshall of Blodgett and Billy Gene Johnson and John Byrd of Bertrand.

Dividend will not be declared

KANSAS CITY — The board of directors of Interstate Brands Corporation, at a meeting Nov. 13, voted not to declare a dividend on common stock for the fourth quarter of 1974.

The board did declare the regular quarterly dividend of $1.20 per share on preferred stock.

The dividend on preferred stock is payable Dec. 27 to stockholders of record Dec. 10.

With headquarters in Kansas City, IBC is one of the nation's largest bakery-food firms with 31 plants located at strategic locations across the country.

Dentist awarded fellowship

Dr. Dewey E. Urban, 920 Moore St., was among two Missouri dentists recently awarded a fellowship in the Academy of General Dentistry at its recent 12th annual convocation in Washington, D.C.

The Academy of General Dentistry, with some 13,000 members, is the second largest dental organization in the nation. It's primary concern is continuing education of the general practitioner, to keep current with new techniques and treatment.

Fellowship is awarded only after dentists have been members of the Academy for five years and have participated in 500 hours of continuing education courses.

3 elderly men die in Cairo house fire

CAIRO, Ill.- Three elderly men were trapped in a burning Cairo house and suffocated Tuesday, authorities said.

The name of one victim was withheld while officials attempted to notify his family. An official identified the others as Goldie Breck, 67, and James Reed, 85.

Authorities said five men shared the one- story frame house and that two escaped the fire. Three or four firemen donned oxygen masks to enter the burning house in a search for the others but couldn't find them in the dense smoke.

The fire began in a front bedroom near a furnace flue. Two bodies were found near a door and the other was in a bed.

A fireman said, "These were...old- age pensioners living together."

25 fines levied for motor vehichle violations

NEW MADRID— Twenty-five fines totaling $1,182 have been levied on motor vehicle violations by Magistrate Judge Leo Hedgepeth.

A truck operator, Clarence Mack, drew the largest fine, $270 for operating an overweight vehicle of 3,200 pounds.

Robert Lee Henderson was fined $30 for driving without an operator license and Fred Steven Sickrey was assessed $25 fine for failure to stop for stop sign.

Paying $20 fines each were David Lewis Maxwell, failure to stop at stop sign; George Smith, permitting underage operator to drive; George C. Heavener, improper registration and expired vehicle license; and Bennie Joe Thomure, operating vehicle without a cover on load.

Charged with speeding as a result of radar surveillance and forfeiting bonds were: Tommy Ballard, $75; and Richard Allen Milbrandt, Robert Monroe Hottinger, John A. Tate, Sandra Pasquing, Andrew Clayburne Jr., Delores H. Crockett, John Robert Whalin, Willie Lee Conner and Frank Carpenter, $50 each.

Others paying fines on speeding charges include: William W. Segers Jr., $44; George Allen Orr, $35; Julian Moore, $32; Gene Raymond Aufdenberg, Paul Bruce Cholerka and George Dean Castle, $30 each; Larry Ray Clifton, $26; and Richard Lee Nowell, $25.

Only 1 bid submitted on water system

CHARLESTON--- Bridger Plumbing and Heating Co. of Sikeston was the only firm to submit a bid on proposed improvements to the city's water system by the 5 p.m. deadline Tuesday.

City Manager Willis Downs said the bid was higher than the estimated cost tabulated by the city's engineering firm of R.W. Booker and Associates of St. Louis, and would be taken under advisement for reviewing by the City Council and the engineers.

The city has 30 days from the opening of bids to review the bid and investigate the qualifications of the bidder, prior to awarding a contract.

Proposed improvements include the installation of water lines, and modification of the city's water treatment plant and appurtenances.

Martin draws prison terms

BENTON-- Paul David Martin of Sikeston has been sentenced in Circuit Court to two three- year terms in custody of the state department of corrections on separate charges of burglary and stealing. Sentence was handed down after Martin withdrew an earlier plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty.

Charges stemmed from the break- in on July 16 of Maple Oil Co., 1411 W. Malone Ave. in Sikeston, and the theft of $4 in pennies and an unstated amount of cigarettes.

Judge Marshall Craig ordered the two sentences to run concurrently and referred Martin to a probation and parole officer to find if Martin is suitable for parole.

Percy Lee Holman of Sikeston was sentenced to three years in prison after he pleaded guilty to a charge of forcible rape on Oct. 15. He was also referred to the probation and parole officer.

Charles Watson of St. Louis received a six- month suspended jail sentence after he waived formal arraignment and entered a plea of guilty to assaulting Carol B. Porter of Malden on Feb. 13 with a loaded shotgun. He was placed on probation for one year.

Watson was originally charged with felonious assault, the charge was changed to common assault.

Columbus Jefferson of Haywood City was placed on probation for three years on a charge of felonious assault on July 21 by shooting a shotgun at Louise Wiley of Crowder.

Henry A. Powell of Sikeston was placed on probation for three years in connection with the break- in on Aug. 15 of Jimmerson's Service Station, 703 W. Malone Ave., Sikeston and the theft of several cartons of cigarettes.

Eugene Brock Harris of Sikeston was sentenced to one year in the county jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving an automobile owned by Jarvis Motor Co., Inc., of Sikeston on July 15 without permission of the owner.

Robert Eugene Stacy Jr. of Sikeston was placed on probation for three years on a charge of stealing a car from Laura Brown of Chaffee on Aug. 12, and was placed on probation for three years in connection with the theft on Aug. 23 of a car owned by Paul Myers of Sikeston.

James Benjamin Hall of Sikeston waived formal arraignment and entered a plea of not guilty on a charge of possession on Sept. 9 of more than five grams of hashish. Trial was set for Jan. 10.

Ronald Joe Yant of Sikeston waived formal arraignment and entered a plea of guilty to a charge of possession on June 17 of less than 35 grams of marijuana. Imposition of sentence was suspended for one year.

Martin Dudley Allen of Walnut Ridge, Ark., and Danny Campbell and Gary Dikes of Hoxie, Ark., waived formal arraignment and changed their pleas from not guilty to guilty on charges of possession of more than 35 grams of marijuana on May 27. Punishment was taken under advisement and they were referred to a probation and parole officer.

Choruses to present joint fall concert

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The men's and women's choruses of Southeast Missouri State University will present a joint concert Nov. 26 in Academic Hall.

The 8 p.m. program is free and open to the public. Most of the music will be sacred in nature.

The 75-member men's chorus, called the Meistersingers, is directed by Dr. Doyle Dumas, head of the music department.

Soloists during the Meistersingers' portion of the program will be Don Sowers of Houston, Mo., and Chuck Hanna of Illmo Route 1. Accompanist for the Meistersingers is Richard Dale of Oran.

The 85-member women's chorus, called the Cantorae, is directed by Gordon Corwin, instructor of music.

Soloists forthe Cantorae will be Miss Rebecca Perrin of Ellisville, Miss Debbie Buck of Cape Girardeau and Miss Beverly Reece of Malden.

Miss Reece is also the accompanist for the Cantorae.

University to dismiss Nov. 27

CAPE GIRARDEAU —Thanksgiving is only about a week away, and among the many things which most Southeast Missouri State University students are thankful for this year is that the traditional celebration will bring them a four-and-one-half day break from classes.

The university will dismiss classes at noon Nov. 27 and resume at 8 a.m. Dec. 2.

Thanksgiving comes later in the month than usual this year and when the semester begins again there will be only two weeks of classes and a week of final examinations remaining.

The fall term officially ends on Dec. 19, and students will have nearly a month off.

Enrollment for the spring semester will take place Jan. 13 and classes will begin Jan. 14.

Dance group to perform

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Terpsichore, Southeast Missouri State University's modern dance group, will give its first studio performance at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Parker Physical Education Building dance studio.

The group, which presents an annual spring concert, will perform pure dances with no special costuming, lighting, or sets. Sound effects, for the most part, will be live.

The performance will consist of three parts: "Elements of Life," containing "Things We Feel" and "Things We See," interpretations of Japanese haiku poetry, and a short dance entitled "Friendship."

There is no admission fee and the public is invited to attend.

Grain Market

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures prices were strong in early dealings on the Chicago Board of Trade today, while soybeans were mixed with distant options sharply higher.

On the opening, soybeans were 3½ cents a bushel lower to 28 higher, January 7.45; Chicago wheat was 1 to 3 higher, December 4.82; Gulf hard red wheat was not traded; corn was 1 to 5 higher, December 3.50 and oats were 1½ to 2¼ higher, December 1.69.

Chrysler announces additional layoffs

DETROIT (AP) — The Chrysler Corp. has announced thousands of additional layoffs, raising to 64,200 the number of its employes scheduled to be off their jobs in December.

Chrysler said Tuesday it was laying off 35,500 workers temporarily and 8,400 indefinitely, closing all but one of its six U.S. car plants and making "extreme cutbacks" at 42 manufacturing plants from the day before Thanksgiving until Jan. 6. The firm said the action is aimed at cutting its inventory of unsold cars.

The firm is the nation's seventh largest with a total blue-collar work force of 105,000. With 22,000 workers currently on indefinite layoff, the total effect of the layoffs will be to put 64,200 out of work in December, or about 61 per cent of the Chrysler work foce.

Some 95,000 auto workers are on layoffs this week, including 37,000 indefinitely at General Motors, 10,425 at Ford, and 16,000 at Chrysler.

The total Big Three work force is 650,000, down from 750,000 just 13 months ago, and there are persistent reports that further layoffs are imminent. "It looks like the roof is about to cave in," said one union official.

Facing the prospect of at least 110,000 Big Three employes out of work in the pre-Christmas period, union officers reacted quickly and angrily to the Chrysler announcement.

United Auto Workers Vice President Doug Fraser accused Chrysler of "sloppy management" or "manipulation" and said the layoffs were the most serious ever at Chrysler "in terms of one fell swoop."

He called for the resignations of Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend and President John Riccardo, blaming them for Chrysler's buildup of 380,000 unsold new cars — enough to supply dealers for four months.

"When they make mistakes, they don't pay for them, the workers pay for them," Fraser said, pointing out that the firm produced 62,000 more cars than it sold in September and October.

Three Detroit assembly plants will be down along with two others, leaving just the St. Louis, Mo., facility in operation.

Although the firm will not close its 42 supply plants, production cutbacks there were described as "extreme" with many layoffs.

Chrysler said production will resume at a slower pace at the six U.S. car plants in January. Chrysler sales during October were off almost 17 per cent, and early November deliveries plunged 34 per cent to a 13-year low.

Industrywide, new model sales in October were down 27 per cent from the year before and early November sales fell 38 per cent.

Tenn., investigator, said the shells were plastic coated. "This is the type of shell that would splatter upon impact and make it very hard to run any ballistics tests on."

Missouri authorites have been unable to determine the caliber of the bullet taken from the deceased head because of its condition.

Dunklin County Sheriff Raymond Scott said he did not know if ballistics tests would be requested from Tennessee authorities by his office. Scott said the bullet recovered "was torn up so badly it won't classify. That's my impression, but I'll check."

Goodman was arrested in an automobile registered in Tennessee to a relative, Calvin Nunnery of Williston, Tenn. Nunnery reportedly now lives in Parma, also.

A neighbor of the Garrison home in Kennett, Victor H. Landrum, told of seeing a two-door model, light-colored car around 9:10 a.m. on the morning of the crime. Landrum first told of seeing a man walking around the car, but told of seeing two persons beside the car when he looked out to check on a noise he heard, which he described as a "backfire".

Landrum said the car was parked on the bypass, south of his house, and was headed west. "One man was slender, had red sandy hair and wore glasses. The other man was shorter and had black hair," Landrum recalled.

"Yes ... I think I can identify the one with the glasses," Landrum answered when asked if he could identify any of them if he saw them again.

Goodman is being held under $50,000 bond in the Fayette County jail. His trial will be conducted Nov. 25.

Dr. Garrison, who received a divorce from Mrs. Garrison earlier this year, is now the subject of a snarled extradition controversy between the governors of Mississippi and Missouri.

Gov. Bill Waller has agreed to sanction Garrison's extradition only if his Missouri counterpart, Gov. Christopher Bond, will guarantee that the physician will be allowed to post bail.

Bond has refused to make such an agreement, saying he has no legal right to enter such an agreement.

Dunklin County authorities have sent letters agreeing in part to some of Waller's requests.

Waller made reference in his extradition announcement to "conflicting evidence", which he said was one of his reasons for seeking the guarantee from Bond. The other, he pointed out, was that the doctor should be allowed to treat his patients until the matter is settled in court.

Dr. Garrison, bolstered by more than a dozen witnesses, has claimed he spent the night of Sept. 7 at Pickwick Lake near Corinth on the houseboat of Ronald Windsor, prosecuting attorney of Alcorn County.

Further ruling asked on majority rights law

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—The state Supreme Court has been asked to explain how its overturning of the new majority rights law affects the time the law was in effect before the law was declared void.

The law, changing the majority age from 21 to 18, was declared unconstitutional Nov. 12 because it did not amend the law section by section but merely instructed the reviser of statutes to cross out the number "21" or word, "twenty-one," and insert "18."

Robert M. Sommers, who intervened in the case—involving whether 18-year-olds can serve on juries—for the attorney general's office, filed a motion Tuesday for clarification.

Sommers said numerous phone calls to his office indicate "many citizens...took action in reliance on the validity" of the law between Aug. 13 and Nov. 12 and "Numerous disputes over the legal effectiveness of these actions will undoubtedly end up in the courts..."

The court did not indicate whether it would consider Sommers' motion.

The majority rights law did not affect laws on sale and possession of alcoholic everages, where 21 is the requirement, and does not affect the right of 18-year-olds to vote.

But it allowed 18-year-old males to marry without parental consent, and allowed 18-year-olds to sign contracts, obtain loans, serve on juries and qualify for various licenses.

Jackson residents to vote on 1-cent sales tax

JACKSON - Jackson residents will decide Tuesday whether they want the city to meet the added responsibilities of growth and keep pace with inflation in providing the facilities and services expected by the citizens, according to the city officials.

Revenue from the one-cent city sales tax would be used for free weekly residential refuse collection from two 20-gallon containers, new swimming pool, parking areas, walking paths, nature trail, tree planting, band concert shell, softball diamond, tennis courts, fishing pound, playground equipment, basketball court, picnic tables and shelters, and horseshoe pitching courts, fire station and police station, and street improvements.

Current city revenue cannot keep pace with economic growth and the demands of Jackson citizens for more and better services. With the growth of Jackson comes added responsibilities, and inflation has added to the burden of the City Administration in meeting city's needs.

The tax would be one cent for each $1 spent on purchases at retail, or taxable services.

The program at that time was voluntary, but when few people elected to take the insurance, Congress made it mandatory.

Now communities in flood prone areas must adopt the program or be cut off from all federal loans and money in areas subject to flooding.

Government regulations require that any new structures in the flood areas be tied down, which pertain mainly to mobile homes; be built using flood resistant materials; adequate drainage and flood proofing of utilities.

The regulation that created the most concern among those at the meeting was the one requiring that the first floor of all new houses be built above the flood level.

City Manager Charles Church said the city must decide if the advantages of having the flood insurance, which includes primarily the continued availability of loans, outweight the disadvantages, which include loss of the loans and increased costs for construction site preparation and surveying.

Loans and funds the city would lose include municipal loans and grants, federal mortgage loan insurance, disaster assistance loans, Small Business Administration loans, Farmers Home Administration and Veterans Administration loans. The loss of loans would only be for housing in areas declared flood prone.

One man in the audience called the program "friendly persuasion by a Democratic government."

Commissioner Ted Elliot said the program was one more case of the federal government "ramming something down our throats."

The HUD representatives disagreed. "We should have learned our lesson over the past 200 years," McClure said. He added that over the past 30 years the government has spent $9 billion trying to engineer floods away and instead they have become worse.

He said in a 30-year period a house in the flood prone areas has a 26 per cent chance of being flooded.

He said that to qualify under the federal program the city must adopt the flood elevations, require all new housing be built above these elevators and that non-residential construction be flood proofed to the elevations and make sure nothing is done in the area floodway to raise the level of the water.

The commission asked Church and Assistant City Mbill Whitlock to review a model ordinance and report to the commission on its adaptability to Sikeston.

The model ordinance contains a provision allowing local boards of adjustment to grant exceptions to the elevations. However, McClure pointed out certain exceptions could raise the insurance rates considerably.

Insurance rates for a house built one foot above flood level would be one cent per $100 valuation, while for a house built one foot below the rate, it would be $1.59 per $100. Insurance is also available for contents of the house.

In other action, Church told the commission that $6 million in funds are available in Missouri as part of the federally sponsored Community Development Revenue Sharing Act which will replace urban renewal.

Church said the program is 100 per cent federally funded. The money is to be used for aiding low and moderate income areas. He said the city is looking into the program to see if it is eligible for the funds.

Committee to be asked to require open records

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A special legislative committee will be asked to require all records filed with the state in compliance with the Unfair Milk Sales Practices Act to be open when it considers revisions of the law today.

Sen. Paul Bradshaw, R-Springfield, who has been an active member in the House-Senate committee's inquiry into the problems with the 1959 law, said that in light of Agriculture Director James Boillot's apparent refusal to make the records public, such a provision should be included in the law itself.

The 10-member committee, which is expected by Dec. 2 to develop proposed revisions for submission to the legislature next January, also accepted recommendations on revising the law from the Agriculture Department, the attorney general's office and members of the state's dairy industry.

Low raw milk prices for farmers and skyrocketing prices at the retail level earlier this year prompted scrutiny of the law and its enforcement.

Concerning the open r4cords proposal, regulations issued by the department for implementation of the statute require that price filings of dairies and distributors be kept secret, apparently because of their competitive nature.

Those regulations, which could be changed in 10 days after revised rules are filed with the secretary of state.

Rogers to miss final

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The collegiate careers of nine Southeast Missouri State University football players will come to an end Saturday afternoon when the Indians close out the 1974 campaign at Kirksville against Northeast Missouri State University.

All of the nine seniors have started at one time or another during their careers, and most have been consistent first stringers this season.

The departing players appeared in their last game before home fans over the weekend when the Tribe downed the Lincoln University Tigers, 19-6.

Only eight of the nine will suit up for Saturday's game against the Bulldogs. The absentee will be Steve Rogers, a 6-1, 180-pound defensive back from Chaffee who broke a wrist two weeks ago when the Indians defeated Central Missouri State University.

An honorable mention All-MIAA player in 1973, Rogers was considered by the Indian coaching staff to be one of the best defensive backs in the conference. Despite missing last week's game, he still leads Southeast Missouri State's defensive corps in interception with four.

Three other members of the defensive unit will also be on the "missing list" after Saturday. They are Dennis Helms, a 6-0, 195-pounder, Mike Maguire, a 5-10, 185-pounder, and Robert Johnson, a 6-2, 228-pounder.

Johnson is a lineman from Hillsboro, Ill., who played both offensively and defensively in his various years at Southeast Missouri State.

Both Helms and Maguire are linebackers, and both prepped at Roosevelt High School in St. Louis. Maguire played his first two years of collegiate football at Northeast Oklahoma. Helms played all four years at Southeast Missouri State.

In his first year he was a fullback, but he operated from the linebacking spot during his final three years. Last season he was an honorable mention All-MIAA choice.

Offensively, the Tribe will lose five lettermen through graduation, all of them consistent starters this season.

They are David Goncher, a 6-0, 177-pound flanker from South Chicago Heights, Ill.; Carl Gross, a 6-4, 235-pound tight end from Cape Girardeau, Ron Reed, a 5-10, 210-pound guard from Rogers, Ark.; Ed Slaughter, a 6-1, 165-pound split end from Cape Girardeau; and Robert Stolzer, a 6-1, 215-pound tackle from Festus.

Gross was an honorable mention Little All-America pick last year, Reed made the All-MIAA second team, and Goncher qualified for honorable mention in the All-MIAA voting.

Slaughter was a first team All-MIAA choice, and he has established several records during his four-year stay at Southeast Missouri State.

Last season he set the single season record for pass receiving yardage -- 753 yards. And Saturday in the waning moments against Lincoln he caught the 101st pass of his collegiate career to forge a new mark for number of pass receptions in a career.

The win over Lincoln assured Southeast Missouri State's first-year head coach, Jim Lohr, of a winning season. The Tribe carries a 6-4 record into the finale against Northeast Missouri State's Bulldogs.

The Bulldogs lost to Southwest Missouri State University last weekend and have a 4-6 overall record.

Risco checks Indians

WARDELL — Risco and host-North Pemiscot took expected wins in the North Pemiscot Tourney last night. Risco downed New Madrid 61-45 and North Pemiscot bombed Gideon 83-63.

Risco, seeded fourth in the tourney, got of to a fast start. Holding the Indians to eight points, the Tigers chalked up 15 to take the lead in the first quarter New Madrid fared no better in the second quarter, as they gained only 10 points off the Risco defense. Keeping a tight rein on the Indians wasn't all the Tigers succeeded in doing. Using the first quarter to warm up, they began to find the target more often and hit for 21 markers to put New Madrid on a 36-18 trail.

But the tables turned after the half. Risco had a lid on their basket and just couldn't add up more than seven points. Taking full advantage of their position, New Madrid moved within six of the lead. The Indians' hopes of an upset vanished as they once again fell victim to Risco's top playing. Fourth quarter action gave way to the Tigers giving them a quarter-final berth.

Dennis Patterson, Steve Landers and Charles Johnson paced the Risco team to the win dumping in 17, 14 and 13 points respectively. Steve Glenn led New Madrid's scoring with 16.

Coach McMahon's squad played heads-up ball to meet second-seeding standards. Their gain in the first period helped to make the difference. The Mustangs moved out from Gideon by a score of 19-9. The Bulldogs began finding their target during the second quarter, but North Pemiscot slipped a few more shots by them to hold the lead at the half-time break, 42-28.

The Gideon team came back from the locker room ready to score, which they did, but to no avail. North Pemiscot continued their steady ball handling holding back the Bulldogs just enough to give them a clear way. In the third period, North Pemiscot scored 23 points to that of Gideon's 19. The Bulldogs did not have enough to pull the win in and North Pemiscot took the first step up toward win in their own tourney.

Six North Pemiscot players scored in double figures to produce a winning team effort. Jerry Stewart and Joe Jennings both hit for 17. Dan Robinson pumped in 11, while Johnny Dunbar and Ray Norris teamed for 10 each. Gary Pyland led Gideon's scoring with 21 markers with help from Virgil Sparks, who netted 20.

Tourney action will resume Thursday night at 6:30. In the first game Risco will have a shot at number one seeded Lilbourn and in the following game, North Pemiscot faces competition from Delta C-7.

Bobcats run up unbeaten mark

DELTA--- The Delta Bobcats advanced their record to 3- 0 last night when they handed Oran an 80- 67 decision.

The first half saw good steady ball playing. Delta was able to squeeze past the Eagles by four points, picking up the early edge. Oran remained consistent in their scoring, hitting for 12 markers in the second period as they did in the first. Yet the Bobcats picked up a few more points on the Eagles and at the half led 35- 24.

Delta came back on Oran during the third quarter to open the scoring. It was a wild ending as both teams found easy shooting. Oran came close to pulling off a comeback, but Delta tightened up to capture their third win of the season.

Delta's Nate Crowden had a hot game pumping in 28 points. Back- up men were Mike Kelly and Mitch Stroder with 16 and 14 respectively. Robert Taylor was high scorer for the Eagles with 24 markers. Keith Campbell followed with 16.

Dunklin came away with a perfect night as the Bobcats' also won the J.V. contest by a score of 47- 40. Dunkin led the way for the home team with 16 points. Burlison threw in 13 for the Eagles.

WFL players back league

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
AP Sports Writer

Some World Football League players called reporters together in Memphis, Tenn., to voice confidence in the future of their league and their team.

The only difficulty was that the players were all members of the Memphis Southmen, probably the most solid franchise in the shaky league and one certain to improve when it picks up the likes of Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield next year.

John Huarte, quarterback of the Southmen, whose 17-3 record is the league's best, said on Tuesday the money problems hitting the WFL were not affecting the Southmen, whose principal owner is Toronto millionaire John Bassett.

"We've come in with a first-class operation and put a first-class team out there," said co-captain Don Highsmith.

Huarte said "there will be a strong future for the WFL." He said he was confident owners would solve the league's problems in the coming months and put the weaker franchises in stronger hands.

An example of the league's problems is that Memphis has lost about $700,000 this year, $200,000 more than it expected to lose. An Associated Press survey shows that overall the league has lost about $20 million and several franchises.

Those mounting money problems will be the subject this Friday and Saturday when WFL owners and prospective investors meet in Memphis to seek new dollars and new direction.

Meanwhile, league playoffs will be under way. The Hawaiians visit Southern California and Philadelphia plays at Florida in first-round games Thursday night. The winners play Memphis and Birmingham in the semifinals, with the championship game — called the World Bowl — scheduled Dec. 5.

But more important to this league than finishing its first year is how it will begin its second. Before it can, numerous problems must be solved.

The Birmingham franchise, which lost its offices because it didn't pay the bills and had its assets attached in court for back taxes, is seekng $1.5 million in local financing. Players haven't been paid in several weeks, and tax liens of about $500,000 have been filed against the club and its owner.

Archer sparks South to win

SOUTH PEMISCOT--- Jerry Archer came off the South Pemiscot bench to spark the Bulldogs to a 73- 65 win over Pemiscot County Tuesday night.

It was a battle from the beginning as Pemiscot County fought to get into the winning column. They were able to claim title to the lead in first quarter action by a single point, 21- 20. The Bulldogs tightened their defense while getting their offense moving and pulled together to take the edge at half, 43- 40.

Pemiscot County slowed down the Bulldog's shooting somewhat, but could not take advantage as their hitting was not as steady as before, dropping in only eight. Play was back to par in the final quarter, but it was too late for Pemiscot County.

The Bulldogs. Chuck Bates had 16 points to his credit and Jerry Archer 15. Alan Becker and Mike Clark both shot for 14 while Joe Martin dropped in 12. David Madden had an outstanding night for Pemiscot County, hitting for 29 big markers. McGoughy backed him up with 12.

The Bulldogs record now stands at 2- 0.

Mizzou bids for respectability

COLUMBIA, MO., — Shooting for 7-4 respectability, and a second-place finish in the Big Eight, Ol' Mizzou closes out the 1974 ledger against border-rival Kansas here Saturday afternoon.

None of the bowl's bird dogs will be among the 55,000 expected to view this 83rd football scrap in the oldest college rivalry west of the Mississippi. But -- for both teams -- its won't be simply a case of playing out the schedule.

In what has to be a frustrating season for Kansas -- five straight losses -- the Jayhawkers, 4-6, can soothe their critics by beating the Tigers a fourth, straight time.

Most Mizzou fans, on the other hand, would consider a 7-4 record, capped by a win over K.U., as quite acceptable.

Nobody has to alert Tiger coach Al Onofrio about the perils of playing K.U.

"They are a dangerous offensive team, always capable of pulling off the big play," Onofrio says. "Defensively, they hit hard and pursue awfully well."

Ol' Mizzou goes into this windup game with a fullback problem that has persisted since Ray Bybee was lost in the Colorado game with a fractured ankle.

Since then, the Black and Gold attack has featured Bill Ziegler, Rick Cook and sophomore Jornel Williams in that spot -- but their accomplishments were spotty.This week, Onofrio may tap sophomore Annise Davis for the starting fullback job -- though the rookie from Malden, Mo. has been idle for about six weeks with a sprained foot.

Ziegler, who fractured a big toe against Oklahoma, is back on the practice field this week, but Onofrio is unsure of his availability.

"We're just joing to try to get the work to Ziegler this week, and hope he'll be able toplay," Onofrio says.

Bybee's incapacity has made tailback Tony Galbreath the focal point of opposing teams' defensive blueprints -- and the Jayhawks no less figure to key on the bruising 225-pound junior from Fulton, Mo. The other facet of Missouri's attack is quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz's throwing arm, coupled with split end Mark Miller's penchant for grabbing Zark's tosses.

Miller leads conference recievers with 323 catches for 452 yards and five touchdowns.

Coach Don Fambrough's Big Blue squad has more offensive firepower than Mizzou. The Jayhawks, who switched to a Wishbone-style attack against Oklahoma, exploit the running of quarterback Scott McMichael, tailback Laverne Smith and fullback Robert Miller.

McMichael is the first sophomore in K.U history to pass for more than 1000 yards. He has prime receivers in Emmett Edwards and Bruce Adams. Edwards' end-zone catch with 1:37 left beat Missouri, 14-13, at Lawrence last year.

For Missouri, this is the farewell game for 17 seniors -- 14 of whom will be suiting up Saturday. On the sidelines will be Bybee, safety Tony Gillick, who had knee surgery Sunday, and Tigerback Joe Gross with a dislocated shoulder.

Mizzou leads the all-time rivalry, 38 to 35, with 9 games tied.

The second nicest thing about masonry is that it costs less.

The nicest, of course, is beauty. The result of skilled masons creating walls with craftmanship, texture and durability that can't be imitated by machines.

You might think it would cost more than its metal, glass or precast concrete competitors.

But in most cases, it costs less — initially and over the life of the building.

And finance charges and real estate taxes are less.

If that isn't enough, masonry walls are far less expensive to maintain — because masonry doesn't warp, dent, buckle or rot. And it never needs painting. Also, walls of masonry reduce heating and cooling expenses.

Keep America strong. Build with Masonry.

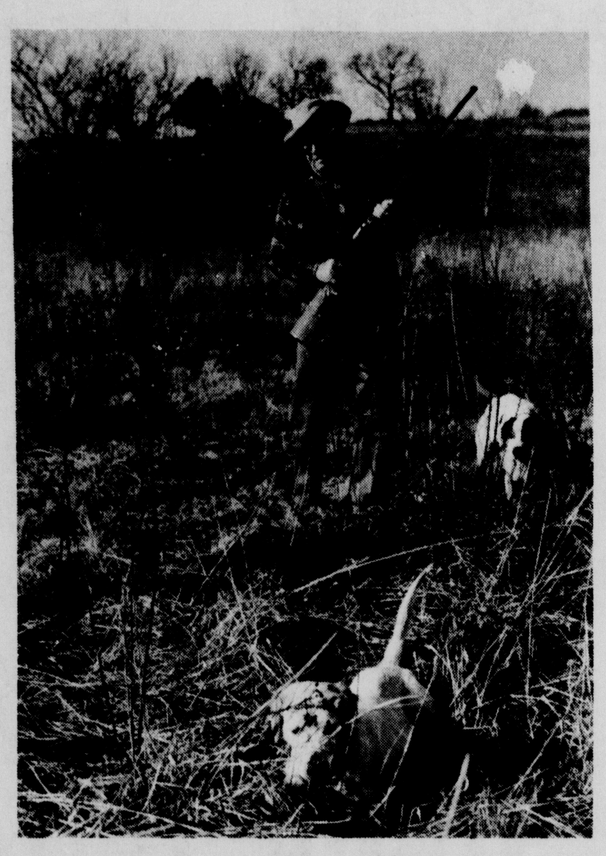
The Hunt

The Missouri quail season is open until Jan. 15 of 1975, with a daily bag of eight and possession of 16. Quail hatch reports were mixed over the state, but early hatches generally were down because of bad spring weather. In many areas, late hatches will make up for the early losses.



Bass tournament not a threat

COLUMBIA — If Lou Brock's success rate on base stealing was as low as the success rate of another type of professional, he wouldn't have been in the running for Most Valuable Player.

A year-long study of Missouri bass fishing tournaments by Arvil Ming, fisheries biologist for the Department of Conservation, shows that the professional fishermen really don't catch all that many fish.

Overall, Ming's study indicates that fishing tournaments in general are not a serious problem to bass fishing on Missouri reservoirs. The tournaments have taken a lot of heat over the years from non-club fishermen who say the bass clubs catch "all the fish."

Not so Ming's figures indicate the average professional tournament fisherman fishes a nine-hour day and takes three bass for a catch rate of only one bass every three hours

"At these rates, it would take 17 tournaments on the same lake to equal a catch rate of one bass per acre," says Mings. "We consider a take of 10 bass per acre to be good fishing."

Ming studied 16 major tournaments in Missour, not including the small club tournaments which are both popular and prevalent.

"The combined catch was 4,270 bass from five reservoirs over a four-month period," he says. "it's equal to one fourth of the annual bass harvest from only one 1,700 acre arm of Table Rock Lake.

"Even if all 16 major tournaments had occurred on the same lake, they wouldn't have had much impact on the bass population. And more than 60 per cent ofthe catch was released alive."

Ming found generally that the more national in scope the tournament the more care was taken with the fish caught.

He found most of the problems occur in the so-called "open" tournaments where fishermen who are not bass club members pay an entry fee and fish for prizes. In "open" or "buddy" tournaments, there is little incentive to the fishermen to keep their catch alive.

"When a bass club sponsors an open tournament," Ming says, they usually do a better job of returning bass to the water and require and enforce stricter rules.

Club tournaments are limited to members of a given club, and average 18 members per tournament. There are 69 bass clubs in Misssouri with 1,630 members. Some of these bass clubs judge fish on length, rather than weight during their tournaments and fish are returned immediately to the water.

"Public criticism has increased along with the number of bass tournaments,' Ming says. "Some think they threaten the resources because of the equipment used, the ability of bass fishermen to catch fish and ther relatively high number of bass visible at weigh-in

"Some criticism stopped when major tournament sponsors adopted the rule for returning caught bass with bonus points given as an incentive forthe tournament fishermen to bring their fish inalive to the weigh-in. The object of our study was to see if the resource is being damaged by the tournament fishermen."

A year ago, the Conservation Commission did two things -- it adopted a position statement on bass tournaments, and it turned Ming loose on the study of the tournaments. The study is almost complete and so far indicates that the tournaments are not harmful to the bass resources.

Cautious optimism on rabbits

You have to use intuition, yers of experience, bales of data and have a memory like the proverbial elephant to be a rabbit biologist.

And, having made the prediction, you have to have the patience of a mother of twins because it will be two months before you know if you're right or not.

But it looks like a good rabbit production year, according to Ken Sadler, biologist with the Department of Conservation. The rabbit season opened Oct. 1 and runs through Feb. 15, 1975, with a daily limit of six and possession limit of 12.

Some years, the prediction of rabbit umbers is relatively easy -- observers statewide see a lot of rabbits and, rabbits being what they are, there should be many more by hunting season.

But in the July census of rabbits in 1974, observers recorded slight improvement in six of the eight regions of the state, ranging from only one per cent over 1973 to 11 per cent -- not a significant statistical change. The Bootheel and the northwest prairie declined.

Therefore rabbit populations should be no better than they were in 1973. Right? Wrong. Or possibly wrong.

"I'm cautiously optimistic that the harvest is going to be better than the survey would indicate," Sadler says. "During the census period, I think it was more often hot and dry than cool and wet and under hot, dry conditions, rabbits just don't appear along the roads when the census is made.

"The only year I can remember when conditions were similar was in 1954, a year of extreme drouth. We had an indicated decline in the rabbit population from the road census, but the harvest showed the the population actually had begun to climb.

"We like to think there is a nice straight-line relationship between rabbits seen and the actual population, but the very hot, very dry conditions can disrupt this relationship."

The census covered 111 counties along 6573 miles of census route. Highest indicated popualtions were in north-eastern region.

"The name of the game has become habitat," Sadler says. "The days when a hunter could find rabbits just about anywhere are gone.

"There still is good hunting, but rabbit hunters have to learn what good rabbit habitat is an d how to find it -- and how to recognize rabbit sign so they know where the animals are there."

Colorful migration in state

JEFFERSON CITY — Picture a flock of canvasback ducks, hanging over the decoys in the icy November chill, their feet splayed toward the water as the hunters breathlessly crouch in the blind. Picture the rich pink glow of their plumage...

Pink!

David Trauger, wildlife biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and other research biologists in the north central states are dyeing male canvasbacks different colors this autumn to determine migration habits and wintering distribution.

Canvasbacks and redheads have had low populations for several years and hunting regulations are very restrictive on both species.

In Missuri, during the October 30- December 18 duck hunting season, the limit is one bird of either species -- they are worth 100 points on the waterfowl point system which gives different species a point value and gives each huner 100 points to work toward.

Canvasback and redhead hunting is closed on the Mississippi River from Alton Dam north to the Iowa line.

The Fish and Wildlife Service biologists have dyed birds blue, yellow and pink. "Any observation of color-marked canvasbacks," says Trauger, "should be reported to the Northern Prairie Wildlife Research Center, P. O. Box 1747, Jamestown, North Dakota 58401."

Trauger wants the name and address of the observer, the date, time, location of the sighting and color of the bird. In addition, information on the activity of the bird, size of the flock and other species in the flock would help.

"Success of the study depends on observation of the colored birds away from the marking locations," Trauger says. "We'd greatly appreciate any help from the public."

A narrow tight rope

COLUMBIA — Deer biologists walk a narrow tightrope with the added handicap that they can't see where they're going ... only where they've been.

Northeast Missouri is having a bucks-only deer season November 16-24 and there are complaints that the deer herd is large enough to permit the harvest of does.

"It's always a tough job to set regulations which give hunters the maximum benefit, but still don't damage the deer herd," says Wayne Porath, deer biologist for the Department of Conservation.

"Last year, hunter numbers increased 31 per cent in Unit Three, which is the northeast river hills, and 26 percent in Unit Two, the north central part fo the state.

"These increases were far above the statewide average increase of 12 per cewnt. The increased hunting pressure resulted in an increase deer harvest of 45 per cent in Unit Two and 46 per cent in Unit Three.

"More importantly, the harvest of does increased 66 per cent in Unit Two and 51 per cent in Unit Three over the previous any-deer season.

"While deer are more productive in the fertile northern Missuri areas, they are more valuable to hunting because of limited habitat. Regulations must take these factors into account in preventing over harvest.

"Once over-harvest occurs, it takes everal years for a deer herd to rebuild and we think the possibility for over-harvest in this part of north Missuri definitely exists."

The problem with Missouri deer management is that the managers have been able to look at the herd after the fact, not before. The best indicator of deer herd health is the hunting season, but it would be far better to know before rather than after.

Missouri has gone to a quota system on antlerless deer in the new Unit Six-A, the river hills of central Missouri, in an effort to manage before the season rather than after. While quotas complicate the regulations, they do give a more accurate harvest system.

The 1974 season will be bucks only from November 16-22 in Units One, Four, Five, Seven, Eight and Nine and any deer November 23-24 The entire season will be bucks only in Units Two, Three, Six-A (the area south of the river hills of central Missouri) and Unit Ten.

There is a quota of 1,200 antlerless deer in unit Six-A.

Hunter safety urged

JEFFERSON CITY — It's as rare and precious as diamonds. It's as desirable as Raquel Welch. It's as uncomplicated as a good parent. It saves more lives than the guard at the beach with the bulging muscles.

It's common sense.

"All the safety rules and regulations in the world won't replace common sense," says Bud Eyman, hunter safety coordinator forthe Department of Conservation.

"This is the time of the year when hunters need to be most conscious of safety -- and to use their common sense -- because this is when the most hunters will be in the field."

Almost all of Missouri's hunting seasons are open, including the gun deer season which will draw a quarter of a million hunters into the field November 16-24. Upland and waterfowl seasons are open and woods hunters will be going after squirrels.

Eyman strongly recommeded the use of "hunter" or fluorescent orange clothing for deer and upland game huntes. "Make your self as visible to other hunters as possible," he says. He also urged hunters to learn and use the Ten Comandments of Gun Safety:

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun.
2. Watch that muzzle. Carry your gun safely; keep safety on until ready to shoot.
3. Unload guns when not in use. Take down or have actions open; guns should be cased when transporting to shooting area.
4. Be sure barrel is clear of obstructions. and that you have proper size ammunition.
5. Be sure of target before you pull trigger. Know identifying features of game you hunt.
6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot. Avoid all horseplay.
7. Never climb a tree or fence or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.
8. Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or water; at target practice be sure your backstop is adequate.
9. Store guns and ammunition separately, beyond the reach of children.
10. Avoid alcoholic beverages before or during shooting.

Cats win pair

LESTERVILLE--- Lesterville ran their record to 3- 1 in last night's basketball action, taking a 73- 56 win over Bunker.

Seth Barton led the attack on the Bunker squad with 26 points. Jim Denbow chipped in 18 and Steve Denbow 14 to aid in the winning effort. Martin hit for 15 to earn high scoring honors for Bunker.

It was a winning night for the Bearcats. The J.V. team won a 46- 34 decision over Bunker. Bill White had a hot hand for the home team, pouring in 21 markers. Hay led scoring for Bunker with 12.

Wednesday's Games

Golden State vs. Boston at Providence

Sooners . . all the way

NEW YORK (AP) — "The lump in my throat is a little bigger this week," says Coach Barry Switzer of Oklahoma.

"We're not loose at all," says Michigan's Bo Schembechler. "This is a big game."

"I don't feel any pressure," says your friendly neighborhood college football forecaster. Let them feel the pressure on the playing fields of Lincoln, Neb., where top-rated Oklahoma meets sixth-ranked Nebraska, and Columbus, Ohio, where No. 3 Michigan faces fourth-ranked Ohio State.

"Our defensive coaches think Nebraska's a better offensive team than they were last year," Switzer reports. "It's going to be the most physical football game we've played. It's the biggest game we've played since we played 'em last year."

That one ended 27-0 in favor of Oklahoma. This one? Try 26-14 ... Oklahoma.

Last week's score was 46 right, 20 wrong and one tie for .697, so maybe we are feeling the pressure, after all. For the season, it's 419-182-16—.718.

Meanwhile, Michigan and Ohio State have their annual Big Ten shootout ... with one difference.

"The difference is that last year both teams were unbeaten and untied," Schembechler points out. "This time, if the game ends in a tie, we go to the Rose Bowl since we've already clinched a tie for the Big Ten championship."

If Ohio State wins, the race will end in a tie and the conference athletic directors will vote on the Rose Bowl representative. You remember the fuss when they voted Ohio State in following last year's 10-10 standoff? Wouldn't it be funny if it happened again?

So be it ... Ohio State 24-17.

Also at stake is the Pacific-8 Conference spot in the Rose Bowl. It will or won't be decided when Southern California meets UCLA. A littie confusion music, maestro.

If UCLA wins, they will be co-champions and UCLA will go to the Rose Bowl by virtue of a head-to-head victory over USC. If UCLA beats USC and California beats Stanford, there will be a three-way tie but UCLA would go (1) because it beat the other two and (2) because Cal is on probation and can't go no matter what happens.

Hold on, there's more. If UCLA beats Southern Cal and Stanford beats Cal, there would also be a three-way tie, but since USC beat Stanford and UCLA and Stanford tied, the team with the best over-all record would go. That would eliminate 4-4-2 Stanford. But UCLA would be 7-2-2 and USC 7-2-1, with one game left.

USC would then have to beat Notre Dame to get the bowl berth. A tie with Notre Dame would send UCLA on the basis of a face-to-face triumph over USC. Ain't no way Stanford's gonna go.

Of course, USC could make the whole thing meaningless by beating or tying UCLA. And that's what's gonna happen ... Southern Cal 28-14.

And, for good measure ... California 27, Stanford 23.

Upset Special of the Week ... Southern Methodist 21, Baylor 17. Bears' bubble bursts. By the way, if Baylor wins, Texas would be eliminated from the Southwest Conference chase.

Elsewhere ...

Notre Dame 35, Air Force 0: Even if ND's looking ahead to Southern Cal, it won't help the 2-8 Falcons, suffering through their worst season ever.

Maryland 38, Virginia 10: Virginia Coach Sonny Randle says Maryland probably is the finest team to ever play in the Atlantic Coast Conference. He's about to find out first-hand.

Michigan State 21, Iowa 7: Young Spartans conclude a 7-3-1 season and start looking ahead to next year.

Houston 31, Florida State 14: Seminoles on another losing streak.

Yale 24, Harvard 14: This makes it a perfect 9-0 for the Yalies.

Kentucky 20, Tennessee 16: Give me liberty ... or the Liberty Bowl.

Louisiana State 21, Tulane 7: Ten weeks ago, they thought this might mean a bowl bid.

Clemson 35, South Carolina 28: Nothing could be finer than for South Carolina to win Paul Dietzel's coaching finale.

North Carolina 40, Duke 30: Get some new batteries for the scoreboard, Myrtle.

Wake Forest 21, Furman 14: Nation's last winless team gets a last-chance win.

Washington report

'Economy must be restored'

WASHINGTON, D.C. — There are few who would disagree with the statement that the most urgent need of the American public today is a comprehensive program to restore the health of our economy.

The complex economic situation in which we find ourselves demands a well-balanced program which reduces prices and at the same time increases productivity.

First, we need heavy cuts in government expenditures – at least double the $5 billion budget reduction recommended by President Ford. The budget of no department can be sacrosanct. Every department and branch of government can find waste.

The President could set a good example for the rest of the government by voluntarily taking a $25,000-a-year salary cut. That would lend credibility to his pleas for every American to adopta more austere life style.

Second, we should have effective controls on wages and prices, including a control on the exhorbitantly high profits that have appeared in a few industries to the disgust of a majority of the American people.

Third, we should implement tax reforms to close certain loopholes which in the main benefit only the very large corporations. Such reforms could be achieved without increasing the already heavy burden on low and middle income families.

Suggested revisions in the tax code include elimination of the deferral of most taxes on income earned by American companies abroad, the taxation of capital gains when transferred at death or by gift, a plased reduction of the oil depletion allowance as well as reduction of the accelerated rate at which assets can be depreciated for tax purposes.

It is estimated that as much as $8 billion in additional revenues could be added to the Federal Treasury if such steps were taken.

A fourth step could well be a program which included measures to increase productivity. To that end I suggest lower interest rates, incentives for private investment in many of the declining sectors of the economy and a reduction in the heavy tax advantages for foreign investment.

Finally, a public employment program is needed – one that reduces the grievous economic effects of rising unemployment.

For every one per cent increase in unemployment, the Treasury loses $12 to $15 billion in tax receipts. Fewer jobs also mean heavier government spending for unemployment compensation, food stamps, Medicaid and other assistance.

We put people to work not only to prevent a loss of revenues, but also to forestall a further decline in national productivity.

These proposals, if carefully written and enforced once they become law, would improve the economy. With sound policies, plus sincere cooperation from all segments of our society, we can get this country back on the track of economic growth.

Prayer for today
from the Upper Room

"Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art...: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it.' (Genesis 13:14-15)

PRAYER: Lord, when deniec enchantment beckons, show me Thy beauty where Thou hast placed me. In the spirit of Jesus. Amen.

Reform work to end

JEFFERSON CITY — After holding six public hearings throughout the state, a citizens advisory committee on reforming the Missouri General Assembly is now entering its final work on recommendations for restructuring the legislative body.

A smaller House of Representatives, fewer committees, a senate where the lieutenant governor does not preside, and the ability to call itself into session appear to be some of the recommendations for the general assembly which the citizens committee is considering.

William Harrison, an executive vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, is chairman of the 25-member committee which has been looking at various reform measures since November of last year.

Harrison says the reform will be presented in package style and not as a "shopping list" from which the legislators could pick and choose. He expects the legislature to seriously consider the committee's proposals.

There is some support in the general assembly for these kinds of reforms, Harrison said, "but whether there is enough, I don't know."

Throughout the six public sessions, Harrison said, reduction of the 163-member House, reduction of the number of legislative committees, salary increases for legislators, extra staffing and the institution of carry-over for bills usually were commented on.

Public support was indicated for all those proposals, Harrison said, although the pay increase and reduction of the house drew criticism, as well.

A final committee meeting is expected sometime in mid-December at which a list of final recommendations will be chosen, and then printed for presentation to the general assembly in Janurary.

Most proponents of reducing the house cited the unwieldy and inefficient size as reasons for a smaller body. But opponents of the reduction say a smaller house would be farther removed from constituents and would not greatly contribute to its efficiency.

Vic Gray, director of legislative programs for the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation, told the committee his organization would oppose any plan to reduce the number of representatives because it would further dilute the power of rural Missourians.

David Leuthold, associate professor of political science at the University of Missouri-Columbia, urged the committee to maintain a large house because a large house is able to develop more experts, train more leaders in participatory democracy, and insure a more personal contact between constituents and their legislators.

Other proposals aired during public hearings, where a total of 47 persons testified on the reform proposals, ranged from "workable" to "unworkable", Harrison said.

The chairman indicated that the establishment of a non-partisan unicameral legislature, proposed several times during the hearings, would not be one of the committee's recommendations.

The substantial power of the house speaker and committee chairmen came in for criticism at several of the public hearings. Rep. John Sharp of Kansas City suggested the committee require committee chairmen to schedule a hearing on a bill within a set period of time once a bill's sponsor requests such a hearing. Curtailment of the speaker's discretion in assigning bills to committees also was suggested at the hearings.

Republiccans especially requested committee membership be made proportional according to the number of legislators each party has in any legislature. Republicans also urged that the minority floor leader be given the authority to appoint minority members of those committees. The house speaker, a Democrat in a Democratically - controlled house, now does so.

A spokesman for Gov. Christopher S. Bond suggested more economic disclosure for lobbyists, prohibition of conflict of interest among legislators, and ccreation of an independent agency to enforce ethics regulations.

Bond and other speakers suggested house and senate journals, the official legislative records, include all amendments and all roll call votes.

EVERYONE'S entitled to unwind now and then and that includes President Ford. On the links of a Washington D.C. golf course, the President sizes up a putt and appears a mite too concerned to be unwinding.

Bennett hosts meeting

Dr. Robert Bennett of Sikeston was host for the dinner meeting of the Southeast Missuri Chiropractic Association held Nov. 17 at the Ramada Inn.

Also attending from Sikeston were Dr. Ed Scheu, secretary of the organization, and Dr. Lamar Bechtold.

Dr. Carl Bird of Caruthersville presided at the business meeting.

Plans were discussed for an educational seminar to be held in the spring. The group selected Dr. Sid Williams of Atlanta, Ga., founder of the Life Foundation and president of the recently established Life Chiropractic College in Atlanta, to be the principal speaker for the seminar. Dr. William Dillman of Dexter presented the program on "Patient Orientatin of Life Principles as applied by Chiropractic Adjustments".

The group will meet again in January when they will review a film prepared by the International Chirpractic Association on the research being conducted by the University of Colorado in Boulder, Colo. on the science of chiropractic and the role it plays in the restoration and maintenance of health.

Mobile home dealers meet

SPRINGFIELD — The Missouri Mobile Housing Institute met Nov. 13-14 at the Drury Inn.

Attending the meeting from Southeast Missouri were Betty and Morris Montgomery of Chaffee, representing Montgomery Mobile Home Sales Inc.; and Pete and Peggy Ferrell of Benton representing Ferrell Mobile Homes.

The state mobile home dealers association has adopted a Consumer Protection Program. Betty Montgomery and Pete Ferrell were appointed to serve as members of the Consumer Protection Board.

Representative completes course

OMAHA, Neb. — Lynn B. Crider Jr. of Sikeston, Mo., Route Two, local representative for Mutual of Omaha and United of Omaha, recently completed a comprehensive insurance course offered at the National Sales Training Center.

The course encompasses professional preparation in presenting innovations in health insurance benefits and services. The training center incorporates the newest methods of educational training, including complete audiovisual facilities.

Crider is associated with the Williams and Associates, general agency for Mutual and United in Chicago, Ill.

Assistant attends conference

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Mrs. Doris Livingston, assistant to Dr. Nat Snider Jr., a Sikeston, Mo., optometrist, attended a continuing education course Nov. 11-15 at Southern College of Optometry in Memphis, Tenn.

The participants attended clinics, workshops and lectures covering advanced optometric office assistantship techniques.

The 30-hour course was directed by Dr. Joyce R. Adema, an optometrist from New Orleans, La., who was assisted by Southern College of Optometry faculty and clinic staff.

The course was under the auspices of the Optometric Extension Program Foundation, Inc. and Dr. Harvey T. Brown, director of continuing education, Southern College of Optometry.

FUNNY BUSINESS By Roger Bollen

Official greets guests

Mr. and Mrs. W. Keith Duncan, 217 Kramer Drive, Sikeston, are welcomed to the 1974 President's Club Seminar by Warren J. Hunzicker, M.D. (center), vice president and medical director of Kansas City Life Insurance Co. Duncan is manager of the Mid-Delta Agency in Sikeston.

6 qualify for President's Club

KANSAS CITY — Five Sikeston persons and one Parma man have qualified for membership in Kansas City Life Insurance Co.'s President's Club, and attended the club seminar held Oct. 15-20 at the Kona Surf Hotel, Keauhou Bay, Hawaii.

Qualifying for membership from Sikeston were W. Keith Duncan, 217 Kramer Drive, general agent for Kansas City Life Insurance Co.; John D. Gallagher, 319 N. New Madrid St.; William P. Hunter Jr., 226 Tanner St.; Roger Tolliver, 849 Cambridge Drive; and Shirley A. Manker, 223 Crowe Place. John M. Leigh of Parma also qualified for the special club.

To become a member, an agent must meet high production requirements during the 18-month qualifying period. His professional achievements in the life insurance business as well as his service to his ommunity also are factors. Qualifying for President's Club membership is considered an outstanding achievement throughout the company and the life insurance industry.

Approximately 15percent of the company's 2,000 licensed agents throughut the country qualified for the President's Club.

W. Keith Duncan became a Kansas City Life general agent in Sikeston, Mo., four years ago after five years as a Company agent. He has qualified for the President's Club six times. He qualified to attend the 1974 seminar on the basis of his agency's outstanding production during the qualification period.

Seven agents in Duncan's Mid-Delta Agency qualified to attend the 1974 Seminar.

John D. Gallagher joined Kansas City Life in 1971. He has qualified for every President's Club since then. He was recognized at the Hawaii meeting as a Top Hatter, one of the company's leading producers.

William P. Hunter Jr., joined KansasCity Life in 1970. He has qualified for every President's Club since then.

John M. Leigh joined Kansas City Life 22 years ago. He has been a consistent club qualifiert during that time, having qualified ten times.

Mrs. Shirley Manker joined the company in 1972 and has qualified for every President's Club since then.

Roger Tolliver joined the company in 1973. This is his first time to qualify for the President's Club.

Doctor attends symposium

WYATT-Dr. Alouise C. Fenton of Wyatt has just returned from a medical symposium held by the American Society of Bariatric Physicians at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev. Dr. Fenton is a former member of the board of trustees of the ASBP.

The bariatric physicians completed an intensive four-day course in the various modalities in the care of obese patients. Among the distinguished lecturers concerned with the multi-faceted aspects of obesity and allied diseases was Dr. Linus Pauling, the recipient of two Nobel prizes.

Dr. Fenton noted that there are, according to the U.S. Department of Public Health, 60 million overweight Americans. This, she concluded, represents a health hazard of epidemic proportions, and, to date, the American Society of Bariatric Physicians is the only viable medical organization directly supporting research and postgraduate education in the fight against obesity the quiet killer.

RISCO - Thanksgiving Day is perhaps the most widely appreciated holiday we observe.

Youngsters enjoy Thanksgiving Day parades which never fail to put them in a festive mood of anticipation for Christmas. Mothers and grandmothers love Thanksgiving because it usually means that family and friends gather together for a holiday of feasting and fellowship during which time bonds of affection are strengthened through joint thanksgiving for the year's blessings.

Last, but not least, most men love Thanksgiving, too! The bountifully- spread tables of food, the traditional television football games, and the fact that Thanksgiving offers a rare day of relaxation, all combine to make Thanksgiving Day a day to look forward.

In preparing for this important day of feasting and thanksgiving, perhaps you'll agree that it's not a moment too soon to begin collecting those special recipes that will make this Thanksgiving dinner one you'll serve with extra pride.

Today's column features some of the traditional dishes, along with some new and different ones for those who may like a change of pace from the usual Thanksgiving menu.

MAKE AHEAD
FROZEN CRANBERRY
SALAD

(Bits of jellied cranberry sauce make this salad different.)

2 (3 oz.) packages cream cheese
1/4 cup salad dressing
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/8 tsp. salt
1 cup drained, crushed pineapple
1 cup diced walnuts or pecans
1 cup diced bananas
1 1/2 cup heavy cream
1 one-pound can jellied cranberry sauce, chilled and cut into bits.

Decorations, optional.

Beat cream cheese with salad dressing, lemon juice and salt until smooth. Stir in pineapple, walnuts and bananas. Whip cream and fold into mixture. Lightly fold in cranberry bits.

Turn into 9-by-5- by-3 inch loaf pan which has been lined on all sides with a double thickness of waxed paper. Freeze until needed.

To unmold, place pan in warm water for a count of 15. Turn out on chilled platter. Place in refrigerator for 30 minutes before serving. Slice to serve. Makes 12 servings.

Decorations: Prepare one package whipped topping mix according to directions. Reserve one-half cup of prepared mix. Spread remainder over sides and top of frozen salad. Use cake decorator with no. 30 tip to make edging from whipped topping along top edges of frozen loaf. Decorate top with turkeys cut from sliced jellied cranberry sauce with cookie cutters. Freeze to set decorations.

GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE

A perfect vegetable dish for buffet dinners.

3 tbsp. butter, melted
2 tbsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. grated onion
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 (12 oz.) packages frozen French- style green beans, cooked
1/2 lb. grated cheddar cheese
1/2 cup corn flake crumbs.

Combine two tbsp. of the butter with the flour and cook gently. Remove from heat. Stir in seasonings and cream. Fold in beans. Place in shallow two quart casserole.

Cover with cheese, then with crumbs mixed with other tablespoon of butter. Bake in 350- degree oven for 30 minutes. Serves eight.

FRENCH- STYLE TURNIPS

(The seasonings make this vegetable different and special.)

9 medium turnips
1/4 lb. bacon in one piece or slab
2/3 cup minced onion
1 tbsp. flour
3/4 cup canned beef bouillon, or 1 bouillon cube dissolved with 3/4 cup water
1/2 to 1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar
1/4 tsp. rubbed sage
1/4 tsp. pepper

Peel, quarter and cook turnips in one inch of boiling salted water for five minutes. Drain.

Cut bacon in one fourth inch cubes; this should make three fourths cup. Cook four minutes in skillet, stirring constantly. Add onion and cook five minutes (do not let brown). Blend in flour. Add bouillon, salt (exact amount depends on saltiness of bacon.), sugar, sage and pepper. Cook two minutes, stirring constantly.

Add turnips. Cover and simmer 15 to 20 minutes or until turnips are tender. Makes six to seven servings.

MUSHROOM
BREAD STUFFING

(A surprise stuffing which will delight your guests.)

1 cup chopped onion
1 (4 oz.) can sliced mushrooms, drained
1/2 cup melted butter
12 cups soft bread cubes
1/4 cup minced parsley
1 tsp. sage
1/4 tsp. pepper
1 (10 oz.) can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 tbsp. milk

Saute onion and mushrooms in one fourth cup butter. Toss together bread, parsley, sage, pepper, one fourth cup butter and sauted vegetables. Stir soup and add to mixture.

Place in greased two quart casserole and sprinkle with milk. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until brown. Makes six to eight servings.

POTATO FILLING

(This is a recipe made the traditional Pennsylvania Dutch way and traditionally served as a substitute for bread stuffing.)

10 cups seasoned, mashed potatoes
2 eggs
3 cups chopped onion
3 cups chopped celery
2/3 cups butter
6 cups soft bread cubes (1/2 inch)
1/2 cup minced parsley
2 tsp. sage
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
2 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. milk
Paprika

Mix eggs with mashed potatoes and set aside. Saute onion and celery in two thirds cup butter. Add bread cubes, parsley, sage, salt and pepper. Toss until golden.

Combine with mashed potato mixture. Turn into a buttered three quart casserole. Dot with two tbsp. butter and sprinkle with milk and paprika. Bake at 375 degrees for 40 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 10 servings.

When I die and Charles gets married the next week after they bury, me, I don't want a one of you to say one ugly word to him, cause believe you me, it will be with my blessing. (Provided that is, that she's a nice, practical matronly sort of lady and not one of these "sweet young things" these old middle- aged Romeos think have flipped over their false teeth, bald heads and beer paunches -- men can be so dumb and ignorant, but I guess that's why they're so easy to catch in the first place so I'd best not complain!) Anyway, Charles is adorable in his own little awkward way, and he really and truly needs someone to lookout for him and if I die, well, even a week on his own could lead to such disasterous results and dire accidents he might not be around much longer than me if he didn't have a keeper near at hand. You think maybe I exaggerate? Well, if I hadn't been there who would have pulled him out of the manhole he fell into crossing a street in downtown St. Louis, and who would have dodged in and out among the traffic picking up the Christmas packages he threw all over the intersection as he dropped from sight? Or, if I weren't there who would keep him from going to work each day with an orange sport coat, purple shirt, wine pants and yellow socks on -- now don't laugh. I know you're bound to have seen him some mornings when I haven't caught him before he's gotten out the door and wandered at his array of rainbow checks and stripes. Plus, who would find the hammer in the drawer that he's opened and looking at but can't see? or the shirt in the closet his hand is resting on but can't seem to find? So you see, he needs someone, and I was never more convinced than this weekend when dining out with Charles at the new seafood restaurant in the Chase. I was reading through the menu when I noticed this heavy whirl of smoke right before me eyes. I thought surely not, but by now I know better, so I very calmly lowered by menu and quietly said to Charles, "Darling, you've laid the top half of your menu on the candle and you're fast going up in flames and believe me -- he was!!

MUSIC TO HURRY BY

TORONTO (AP) — Veteran band leader Benny Louis wants to see piped music installed in the Toronto subway system and the Toronto Transit Commission is interested. Louis, who has been asked by the TTC to submit a report, says the speakers could be arranged in such a way that travelers who didn't want to listen to the music or news reports could easily move out of earshot.

Tasty holiday pies need flaky crusts with pizazz

By VIOLETTA LANE

The holidays are getting closer, but all year round there is a wealth of food for pie. Just about every fruit or vegetable in the market stands at attention awaiting selection for pie making.

You can close your eyes and visualize about any combination for pie- eating pleasure; pies as light and fluffy as cotton candy or the heavy, rich varieties of your choice.

No matter how fine the bakery, it is hard to beat a good homemade pie. The secret is in the crust.....but what is the crust without a good filling? With a few simple rules for both, your date with a pie should be a real success.

Remember, when making fruit pies, use a deep plate so that the juices will not escape.

When using flour, tapioca or corn starch to thicken juices, mix with sugar, spices and fruit in a bowl before placing in crust. In this way the flour, sugar, etc., are well distributed.

A small amount of butter and lemon juice add flavor and pep to any pie.

Brushing the bottom crust with egg whites helps it to stay crisp in fruit and custard pies.

In the country, I've tasted delicious pie crusts made with chicken fat, which can be purchased in some of the poultry markets today. When the fat from the chicken is rendered and cooled, it may be substituted for shortening in pastry. It is good and does the job well.

One country mother who could not afford shortening surprised me by making pie crust with cold, strained bacon fat. To tell the truth, I couldn't taste the difference. But it takes time to master all the little tricks that go into making unusual crust. So, when we are fortunate enough to have the best, let us make the most of it.

Making pie crust is not easy. Success cannot be attributed to luck, but to the simple directions and rules called for in the recipe.

It is always wise to try several recipes in order to find the one that is easiest for you, then stick to it until perfected. Remember the following fundamental rules: measure accurately, handle crust as little as possible, use cold or ice water, use cold shortening, and remember that wet, sticky pie crust dough is sure to make tough crust.

Try some of the following recipes for some real good down home eating.

PIE CRUST

1 cup flour
2 heaping tbsp. lard.
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 cup cold water

Place all ingredients in a mixing bowl and mix until you produce a flour as fine as cornmeal. Add a little cold water at a time, about one fourth cup until mixture will hold together. Roll out very thin on a floured board.

PLAIN PASTRY

2 cups sifted flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. vinegar
Cold water
2/3 cup shortening
1/2 tsp. sugar
Pinch of baking powder

Sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder. Add shortening. Cut in with a fork or using pastry blender. Pour the vinegar and water into the flour mixture, a few drops at a time, mixing with a fork until it will hold together. Chill. Roll out as quickly as possible. Makes a double crust for a nine inch pie for two pie shells.

BUTTER PASTRY

2 cups sifted flour
1/2 tsp. sugar
1 scant cup butter
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 cup ice water

Sift flour, sugar and salt. Cut in butter with pastry blender or fork until coarse as cornmeal. Add just enough water to hold together. Chill. Roll out to one eighth inch thickness. Makes one eight inch pie or two shells.

EXTRA FLAKY PASTRY

2 cups flour
1 tsp. salt
3/4 cup shortening
Cold water

Mix and sift flour and salt. Cut in half of the shortening and add enough water to make a stiff dough. Roll out on a slightly floured board and dot with bits of shortening. Fold dough over and roll again. Fold once more. Add more shortening and repeat until all shortening is rolled into dough. Chill and use same as plain pastry. Makes one nine inch two crust pie.

BLACKBERRY ROLL

1 box blackberries
one tsp. lemon juice
2 tbsp. butter
Crust for one pie
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. nutmeg
1 tbsp. flour

Wash berries, sprinkle with sugar and spices. Add lemon juice. Roll crust into rectangular shape, very thin. Sprinkle with flour and dot with butter. Pour berries over dough. Roll tightly, as jelly roll. Place in moderate oven, 350 degrees.

Mix together one tbsp. butter one third cup sugar and juice of one orange and baste roll with this mixture for approximately 30 minutes. Serve warm with orange sauce. Serves 6 to 8.

CHERRY ROLL

2 cups sifted flour
3 tsps. baking powder
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
6 tbsp. shortening
2/3 cup milk
1 can red cherries
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. mace

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in shortening with pastry blender or fingers. Add milk gradually to form a soft dough. Kneed lightly. Roll out to one fourth inch thickness. Drain juice from cherries. Add sugar, mace and vanilla to cherries and spread over dough.

Roll like a jelly roll. Dot with butter. Pour two cups of water over roll which will produce its own sauce. Bake 35 to 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Serves 6 to 8.

Here is another quick goody to prepare for the holidays when unexpected company pops in.

OATMEAL CAKE

Pour 1 1/4 cups hot water over 1 cup uncooked oats. Let stand.

Mix 1 cup white sugar
1 cup brown sugar, 1/2 cup shortening and 2 eggs until smooth.

Sift 1 1/4 cups flour, 1 teaspoon cinammon, 1 teaspoon soda and 1/2 teaspoon salt together and add to egg mixture; mix well. Take oat mixture and 1/2 cup raisins, add to the batter and mix well.

Pour into greased and lightly floured pan in 350- degree oven for 35 minutes.

ICING

3/4 stick butter
2 tbsp. cream
1 cup brown sugar

Blend well before pouring on cake.

Add icing to the cake after the cake has baked for 25 minutes. Simply pour icing over top of cake, then replace cake in oven to finish baking (about 10 minutes).

SUNDAY

And the people stood by, watching; but the rulers scoffed at him, saying, "He saved others; let him save himself, if he is the Christ of God, his Chosen One!" — Luke 23:35.

Letters to the Editor

TO ALL SOUTHEAST MISSOURI FARMERS

The day after election there was a quote on the radio and on the national news, that our senator, Thomas Eagleton stated that Secretary Butts should be made an ambassador to some foreign country to get him out of the United States. It is my personal view and I believe it is the view of almost every farmer in Southeast Missuri, that Mr. Butts is the only secretary that we have ever had that has had the farmer's interest at heart and at the same time the consumers. It appears to me there is a bunch of burocrats that would like to lower the cost of inflation thru the farmer. It wouldn't lower the cost very much if we gave our products away. I was surprised that Senator Eagleton would make a statement like that, after coming to our section of the state and getting as much support as he did from rural Missouri. Maybe four years from now the reception he gets here won't be the same.

W. C. Bryant

Nov. 7, 1974

Dear Sir:

I voted a straight Republican ticket last Tuesday and I am proud of it. The media did a better job keeping up with the electioin in 74 than they did in 70. I heard on Channel 6 news that only 2 of about 15 knew just one candidate was for congress of the first district of Kentucky and the rest didn't know any of them. I think it is about time for people to know some of their candidates that they are voting on. I predict Danforth will run for Senator in 76. I hear that .76 is going to be exciting if Bond runs for senator. The Democratic primary is going to be a hot race for Governor, Senator Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General. I would hope to see the hot races in Kentucky again in 1975. I wonder when there going to talk about it. I hope I get to see them get hotter than 1963. I seen a film on Chandler in that year by Breattitt it was really bad I couldn't believe it. I have just heard who was going run next year. From the count there is three people running are going to announce. It is interesting to see what Jullian Carroll is going to do.

Yours sincerely
Alan Whitaker

Dear Sir:

I am enclosing a copy of my response to a recent "Letter to the Editor" which appeared in the Sikeston Daily Standard. I hope that you will find the letter suitable for publication so that both sides of this issue can be expressed.

Should you decide to publish this letter, I must ask that my signature be included.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,
E. H. Webb,
Fiscal Officer
Delta Area Head Start

A recent letter to the Editor entitled "Headstart Needs a New Grantee" raised several points which certainly call for clarification. Obviously the author of that unsigned letter made no effort to present the positive aspects of the Headstart Program in the Bootheel. Worst of all, no consideration whatever was shown for the 1,300 children who now receive nourishing meals, qualified medical attention, and educational preparation for elementary school through the efforts of the Headstart Program and Headstart personnel. Let's keep in mind that the primary purpose of Headstart is to help needy preschool children. The "Letter to the Editor" ignores these children and approximately 250 hard working, dedicated, underpaid employees who are involved in making the Program work for the benefit of these children. The person who wrote the letter published on November 6 shows an amazing lack of concern for the many benefits derived by Headstart enrollees. All too literally, he or she is ready to "throw out the baby with the dishwater."

As for DAEOC's operation of the Headstart Program, I was intrigued by the fact that the author referred several times to "policy violations" without identifying a specific "policy" or so much as one specific violation. In regard to the termination of Mr. John Porter, former Social Service Director, the author stated that Mr. Porter was never advised of the charges against him. This statement is absolutely untrue; Mr. Porter was informed in writing of the reasons for his termination. I believe that anyone concerned with proper business procedure as the author of that letter seemed to be should recognize that an employee who does not perform his work satisfactorily should have the problem explained to him, be asked to make the necessary improvements, and finally be dismissed if he consistently refuses to follow reasonable directions and fulfill his duties in a mature and responsible manner. Unfortunately for everyone, particularly the children involved, Mr. Porter did not accept the full responsibilities of his role with Headstart; his employment was therefore terminated. Someone who is so interested in the traditions of our country must realize that the American business system is founded on the right of a supervisor to instruct and supervise his employees. It is also founded on the principle that the employee should understand his duties and fulfill his responsibility. What kind of a country would we have if everyone did exactly as he pleased with his work, blatantly ignored the instructions of his supervisors, and then refused to leave when employment was terminated? The author is prescribing "backroom business" in the worst sense of the term.

As for a lack of concern with DAEOC's operation of Headstart on the part of the Regional Office of Child Development in Kansas City, the author shomehow failed to mention that a four-man evaluation team from Kansas City spent nearly three days in the Bootheel this week conducting a full investigation of Headstart and DAEO C. This team was doing what the author should do if he or she is REALLY interested in the Headstart Program -- they came down to see for themselves. Any interested parent who is concerned about Headstart would be welcomed in any of the twenty-two Delta Area Headstart Centers or in the Central Headstart Office at Hayward. Then their view of the situation wuld at least have a basis in fact.

For a point of information, Mr. C. B. Huber is considered an excellent Director and is highly respected by the vast majority of the Headstart personnel. His annual salary compared to area Superintendents of Schools is quite low and his administration includes 1,300 pre-school children over a six-county area with 22 Centers. Speaking personally, I wouldn't accept the criticism of uninformed individuals like the person who wrote that letter for TWICE that amont of money!

Sincerely,
E. H. Webb,
Fiscal Officer

Thousands of migrating swallows recently became too cold and hungry to fly over the Alps. Bird lovers started a program which transported some birds to warmer climates by airliner and train. The French Bird Protection League has reported that the birds have reacted badly to this act of mercy and were dying in "increasing numbers," The World Almanac notes. The league suggests that cold birds be warmed, fed and then set free.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

November 14, 1974

To the editor:

In a recent column (11-3-74), Jack Anderson charged that the U.S. sought to bankrupt the Allende government by denying multinational bank loans to Chile." He suggested that the U.S. had succeeded in this, bringing about Chile's "financial strangulation." This conclusion by Anderson was based on the assertion that Chile had come to depend on loans from the Inter-American Development Bank, and these were cut off.

Anderson is in error. Disbursements of Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) loans to Chile were actually higher during the three years Allende was in office than in the three preceding years. The bank disbursed 79 million dollars in Chile in 1971-73, compared to $70 million in 1968-70.

It is also incorrect that Chile was heavily dependent on these IDB loans. IDB loan disbursements have never financed more than a fraction of Chile's imports. They were a their highest in 1972, when they amounted to $29 million. This was enough to pay for about 2.5 per cent of Chile's import bill. These loans have also represented only a small part of Chile's external borrowing.

Those who exaggerate the importance of the IDB loans to Chile and who falsely state that denial of these loans to Chile was an important cause of Chile's economic deterioration under Allende are usually trying to transfer the blame for Allende's economic mismanagement to someone else.

Allende confiscated large amounts of foreign property without paying for it, and he defaulted on most of Chile's f - oreign debt. It is not surprising that many lenders and investors were not eager to make new loans to Chile. However, Allende did manage to finance a huge increase in Chile's imports, partly by using the money that should have gone for the payment of interest and principal on the foreign debt. Imports rose from $1 billion in 1970 to $1.6 billion in 1973.

But even this was not enough to offset the inflationary pressures generated by Allende's fiscal and monetary policies and by the fall in domestic production. The multinational banks could not very well signal their support of these harmful policies by authorizing new loans for Chile. In the Allende years they disbursed against loans that had been authorized before Allende took office. The decline in new loan authorizations during the Allende regime will be reflected in a lower level of disbursements in the period after Allende's fall.

Sincerely yours,
Reed J. Irvine

Teen awarded $1,350,000 in injury suit

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A Ballwin teen-ager who lost the use of both arms when he touched a live power line last year has been awarded $1,350,000 in damages by a St. Louis Circuit Court jury.

The jury ruled Monday that Paul Glastris, 15, was injured because of negligence by Union Electric Co. and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

The youth was severely shocked Feb. 1, 1973, after he climbed what he thought was an abandoned power pole and accidentally touched a live wire.

The jury said the telephone and electric companies had failed to post "high voltage" warnings at the site.

Cline viewed as probable contender

Several names are being mentioned as possible Democratic contenders in a 1976 quest to unseat long-term State Sen. Albert M. Spradling Jr. of Cape Girardeau, and it is drawing mixed reaction from area top party officials on the possibility of Southeast Missouri losing its most powerful representation in Jefferson City.

The most probable contender is a young Scott County Democrat, C. F. Cline of Sikeston, who during slightly less than two years as 159th District state representative, has indicated strong ambitions for higher office.

While most area Democratic leaders agree that Cline's chances of defeating the state's senior senator are slim, some concede the possibility exists. Those who experess concern over the possiblity of Spradling's defeat foresee Cline favoritism in the four west-edge counties of the 27th Senatorial District, largely because voters there are said to have little or no contact with their state senator.

Spradling, in his sixth term, has not faced opposition since the redistricting of the state's senatorial districts in 1972. The Supreme Court-ordered change in the 27th Senatorial District added the counties of Bolinger, Wayne, Reynolds, Carter, and Ripley to the existing counties of Cape, Scott and Mississippi, and transferred Perry and Ste. Genevieve Counties to the 22nd District.

Should Cline file for the Senate seat, some party officials believe the 35-year-old legislator could carry the four newly-added counties of the district and possibly gain votes in Scott and Mississipii counties because of his ties to that area.

Still, the majority of Democratic officials believe Spradling has surmounted the esteem of persuasive party members in the two Democratic strongholds and would experience little difficulty in mustering the necessary votes from Scott and Mississippi counties, which rank second nd third, respectively, next to Cape County, in voter population.

There is little question among party leaders that Spradling would overwhelmingly carry Cape County in a possible 1976 Democratic primary. And, they say, Spradling would easily win Cape County in a general election that year should a Republican candidate become a contender.

But there is little talk at present of a GOP nominee for Spradling' seat. The name of Gary W. Rust of Cape Girardeau, representative of the 156th Legislative District [illegible] 1972 and an unsuccessful candidate against 10th District U. S. Rep. Bill D. Burlison in 1970, has been mentioned as a Republican contender, but Rust says he is "pleased," with his present position and has "no plans to be a contender for state senator in this district."

Among other possible Democratic contenders are 160th District State Rep.. Frederick W. DeField of Charleston; Scott County Prosecuting Attorney James Moore and 155th District State Rep. Marvin E. Proffer of Jackson. Former Scott County prosecuting attorney, Thomas Gilmore, son of D. W. Gilmore who Spradling was elected to succeed in 1952, is considered a formidable forthcoming Democratic senatorial contender, but he says he will not run against Spradling.

The senator himself expresses little worry over the possibility of his being defeated two years hence. He readily admits he is not campaign-oriented -- a striking opposite from Cline -- but, he contends, he cannot carry on a stringent campaign and conduct his legislative affairs at the sametime.

"The people are either going to want a hand-shaker or a legislator. I can't do both," Spradling said when asked his reaction to Cline's almost certain contention. "He (Cline) doesn't frighten me the least bit. I thin k the voters of this district would look more at the record than the hand-shaking," he declared.

The record the senator was referring to was his wealth of legislative accomplishments during his 22 years in the Senate, over which, he has amassed numerous appointments to and chairmanships of some of the most powerful committees of the Senate, including chairman of the Committees on Accounts, Assignments and Clerical Force; Banks, Banking and Financial Institutions and Government Reorganization.

But some party leaders believe that during the course of his reign, Spradling has overlooked portions of his constituency — particularly the additional counties that came into the district two years ago — and has isolated himself from the individual voter.

Some party sources speculate that Spradling would step down from his post rather than carry out a vigorous campaign effort against a host of possible contenders. But Spradling calmed that speculation.

"They said the same thing of the 1964 primary," the senator rebutted. "I didn't step down then and I don't plan to now. I plan to file for re-election on my birthday (March 13) in 1976, as I have always done."

Cline says he has not made any firm commitments to anyone on filing against Spradling, but admits he is "very much interested in that office."

"Many leading Democrats from throughout the district have called me and urged me to run and I have had many offers of support," said. "I have discussed the possibility (of running) with many people in the district and have been feeling the pulse of the people to see if they are happy with the senator." He would not elaborate on his contacts' reactions.

"It's still a long way off," Cline said. "If I do file it will be early in 1976."

One of Cline's would-be supporters, a top area Democrat who asked not to be named, said many people are "disenchanted with the senator." The source said "He has become a statesman rather than a representative of the district. He has lost touch with the people. If he doesn't campaign, C. F. (Cline) will beat him."

Cline supporters agree that if Cline should file prematurely it likely would open the door to numerous other Democratic primary filings and result in a scattering of votes, leaving Spradling overwhelmingly victorious.

The Democrat most party leaders consider as Spradlng's most likely successor is Gilmore, whom some label as "Spradling's hand-chosen successor." Spradling said he has a high regard for the young Sikestonian and "He would make a fine senator."

Asked about his possible contention, Gilmore replied "I haven't given it two seconds worth of thought.

"I have become accustomed to Al Spradling watching over the district's interests. I would not run if Spradling runs. If he decided against running, I would seriously consider it, but I wouldn't say for sure," Gilmore stated.

Spradling has faced opposition in only one Democratic primary election since he was elected in 1952 to fill out the Senate Term of D. W. Gilmore, who resigned to become judge of the 28th Judicial Circuit. He was unopposed in both the 1956 and 1960 primary and general elections, when the district was composed only of Cape, Scott and Mississippi counties.

His only oppositioin in a primary election came in 1964, when Fred A. Steck filed against him. Spradling defeated Steck by a vote of 11,330 to 8,878 in the five counties of Cape, Scott, Mississippi, Perry and Ste. Genevieve that composed the district at that time. Spradling went on in that year's general election to defeat the Republican contender, Ruben R. Schade, by a vote of 32,0407 to 13,644.

In 1968, Spradling defeated Republican candidate Clinton M. Wunderlich, now Cape County treasurer, by a vote of 26,614 to 16,575.

Sugar prices take another big jump

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—Sugar prices took another big jump in Missouri this week, going up 36 cents for a 10-pound bag, a survey by the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation showed today.

The average for the state last week was $4.30 a bag and this week it is $4.66. The highest price was $5.39 at some stores in central Missouri. Other stores in central Missouri also had the lowest, $3.95 a bag.

Last spring sugar was selling for around $3 a bag in Missouri.

The survey of about 50 stores around the state showed slight decreases in pork prices, except for ham, which was up seven cents.

Chicken prices were lower by 2 cents a pound for whole fryers and four cents for cut up fryers.

Group dissatisfied with country music events

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "Our gripe, if we have one, is that these people want to come in and take our music away," said Bill Anderson, in one sentence summing up a week of dissension and controversy in country music.

Anderson and about 50 of the more traditional country music artists are the founders of the Association of Country Entertainers (ACE), formed last week to protest the influx of "these people" into country music.

Chairman Anderson and other ACE members were never really specific about who "these people" were. But one thing was certain, they weren't truly country.

Three days after the ACE was formed last week, two of its members wereelected officers of the Country Music Association.

Not that the voices of Porter Wagoner and Tammy Wynette can change the CMA, but their election shows how seriously the music industry regarded the events which led up to ACE's stormy beginning last Tuesday night.

The artists indicated that they were fed up with a series of so called progressive changes in the industry. They weren't happy with where country music was going. And, although few admitted it publicly, some were afraid they were being left behind.

Entertainer Billy Walker expressed the frustrations of a country music stalwart in a world where upstarts and foreigners have the hit songs.

"Country music is a way of life," he said. "Most of us in this group have been in this town (Nashville) for years. We have fought the road to take the music industry where it is today.

"Then others want to take it over ...."

By others Walker meant "people from California and the East Coast."

"This used to be a very simple, trustworthy town," he said. "Then these people came in and prostituted our business and watered down our music. This was done by big money on the East and West Coast.

"Now, it's a cliquish, political town."

This year's Country Music Association awards were, Anderson said, "the straw that broke the camel's back."

Whereas in the past, a goodly share of the top CMA awards went to such unabashedly country entertainers as Johnny Cash, Charley Pride, Loretta Lynn and Roy Clark, two of the top 1974 awards went to artists with major "cross-over" hits.

Charlie Rich, who some say isn't really country, was named entertainer of the year. His recent hits, including "Most Beautiful Girl" and "Behind Closed Doors," were two of the biggest cross-over successes ever. Both went to the top of country and pop charts.

Likewise, Australian Olivia Newton-John, CMA female vocalist of the year, crossed from pop into country with her songs, "I Honestly Love You" and "If You Love Me."

This is what stuck in the traditionalists' craw — to win a CMA award you have to be a cross-over artist.

"When Olivia Newton-John has gone on network television, she has denied being a country music artist," Anderson said.

"We'd rather see a Tammy Wynette or a Loretta Lynn or an anybody who would say 'Yes, I'm country.'

"Olivia Newton-John's people have said they don't want her working personal appearances with the likes of Porter Wagoner, Tammy Wynette and George Jones."

The election of Wagoner and Miss Wynette to CMA posts Friday fulfilled Anderson's promise to get "more of a voice for artists in the Country Music Association."

During ACE's first week, the entertainers were not sure what it was they hoped to do, except to define country music as music performed by an artist who says he's country — a move to exclude artists from crossing over from pop and taking country music awards.

CMA officers do not, however, have a voice in CMA policy making, the preserve of the board of directors, which was elected earlier this year. Also, the CMA awards are voted by the organization's 4,000-plus membership.

'Kung Fu' star fined

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor David Carradine was fined $250 and placed on one year's probation after the star of the television series "Kung Fu" entered a plea of no contest to misdemeanor charges of mischief and trespass.

Municipal Court Judge Clarence A. Stromwall passed sentence Wednesday after Carradine entered the plea. The actor had been charged with breaking into a neighbor's Laurel Canyon home last Sept. 15 and smashing windows, rifling a bathroom medicine cabinet and overturning furniture.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — About six months ago my brother had an operation. His legs were bothering him so bad he could not walk without pain. The doctors found he had calcium deposits in his arteries and the blood was not getting through. They operated on him and, from what I understand, did a bypass of the clogged arteries with plastic. Anyway, the operation was very successful and he is once again very active.

The doctors also told him he had a slight case of emphysema. He has been told repeatedly he should not smoke (he smoked around three packs a day). He has cut down considerably, but will not quit.

To be frank with you, I don't think he believes the doctors when they say it could cause him more problems. He has a family, and I think he is being very selfish, but since I have never smoked maybe I don't understand what it's all about. Please explain just what could happen. He is 56.

DEAR READER — He sounds like most smokers. Cutting down helps some, but a person who already has lung changes should quit entirely. The tissues in the lungs affected by cigarette smoking need to be free of exposure entirely so the cells can start to grow normally again. It will take several years to get the maximum benefit from stopping smoking anyway. As long as he continues to smoke the damage from heavy smoking will not be adequately reversed.

As the lung changes progress they reach a point where it is impossible to reverse the process. These people end up literally dying gasping for breath. It is one of the most unpleasant deaths I know of and rivals or equals the problems of widespread cancer. You can relieve pain in cancer, but there is almost nothing the doctors can do to relieve the breathless, smothering feeling of the person with advanced lung disease.

Beyond this is the problem of lung cancer, which occurs almost exclusively in male smokers, and the problems of heart and vascular disease. The diseased artery your brother had surgery for is warning enough. The changes began with fatty deposits in the arteries and then calcified. The same thing happens in the heart. Sudden death from heart attack in smokers is almost three times the rate in nonsmokers with all other factors being equal.

Strokes are also increased in heavy cigarette smokers. Your brother should be thankful he is not already crippled from disease of his arteries and can thank those wonderful advances in medicine that have made it possible for him to have a second chance. A stroke may not give him a second chance. He could be severely disabled but still alive.

Yes, he is at the very least not giving enough weight to the seriousness of his problems. It is tough to quit smoking, but not impossible. Men, incidentally are more successful at this than women. He needs to quit, not cut down or use a milder cigarette. No one should smoke, in my opinion, but certainly no one with his medical problems.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Charlie!

I would like you to print my letter to the parents of school children.

If you have a son, or daughter come home with a jacket, tennis shoes, sweats, or any article that you have not gotten for him, please, for the sake of other parents, who work hard to pay for what their kids wear, question him about where and how he got it. It wuld help to stop a lot of thiefts in our school systems. And MAYBE help your child in the future.

My son bought and paid with money he earned himself, a school jacket, and the first day he wore it to school, had it stolen.

It is very upsetting for the kids as well as the parents.

If you have ever bought one, you know how expensive they are.

Letter To The Editor

I, Bob Daniels as a concerned citizen to other citizens would like to give my views and make statements pertaining to the mandatory solid waste problems we are experiencing, as a result of this Solid Waste Act. I would also like to comment on a publication by Mayor Cravens of New Madrid appearing in the Weekly Record, which I feel came a little late.

Basic question, Does the act require a city either to provide the service directly or to contract with an independent hauler to p rovide service to all residents or does the law permit the city to enact regulations which would require residents to enter into a contract with a private hauler without the city itself becoming a party to such contractical agreement.

I believe only the courts of the State of Mo. can answer this question and other questions pertaining to the Solid Waste Act. The Attorney Gen's. answer and opinion, as stated in the Weekly Record by Mayor Cravens publication is that the State of Mo. will rule in this way. However it is also his opinion, No. 63, that no record can be found ruling whether or not a municipality has the right to terminate utilities for failure to pay garbage collection charges, although it has been held in Mo. that a municipality operating a waterworks for profit was acting in a proprietary capacity and could be sued for damages for wrongfully cutting off a customer's water supply. Whitsitt vs. City of St. Clair 80 3. W. 2d 696 (St. L. Ct. app. 1935).

I feel the city board of New Madrid should have publically made known all facts and issues of the different ways outlined by the Solid Waste Act to pick-up the solid waste and different ways outlined to collect for service charges, and the public accept a favorible means after public vote has been given.

Section 260.210 par: 1 states, and I read only part of this section; and shall not prohibit the disposal of or require a permit for disposal by an individual of solid wastes resulting from his own residential activities on property owned or lawfully occupied by him when such wastes do not thereby create a public nuisance or adversely affect the public health.

My comment on Mayor Craven's second question of the Weekly Record Publication. I now state the question again, Does the city have the right to bill the customer for solid waste pickup?

Mayor Craven's answer pointed to sect. 4.1 of Mr. Danforths opinion and I quote. Sec. 4.1 of the solid waste law which authorized cities and counties to levy and collect charges for collection and disposal services. This would not allow a city or county to authorize its trash contractor to levy and collect service charges. The Attorney Gen. therefore concludes it is the responsibility of the city, not the contractor, to do the billing.

When I read section 4.1 of Mr. Danforth's opinion written to Honorable J. H. Frapper, Representative, District 56, it read like this.

Sect. 4.1 of the solid waste act authorizes cities and counties tolevy and collect service charges and to levy an annual tax, after favorable public vote (sect. 10) I am not reading all of sec. 4.1 only completing the part Mayor Cravens quoted. The interpertation of this section and just what it does mean is in question, But you the people be the judge. I still want to ask if you were ever given the right to vote on this issue??

The case of Cassidy vs. city of Bowling Green that Mayor Craven's mentions is in the State of Kentucky and did rule that a discontinuation of utilities may be imposed upon the failure to pay a related bill for garbage disposal, But in the State of Nebraska in the Case of Garner vs. Aurora it was ruled that the authorities are uniform to the effect that a public service corporation can not refuse to furnish its public service because the patron is in arrears with it on account of some collateral or independent transaction not strictly connected with the particular physical service.

The State of Missouri has never made a ruling on this issue and no cases can be found on record in Mo. respecting this question. So, can the Missouri Municipality's legally disconnect utilities because, as is my case, I refused to pay a collection charge for solid waste service, I did not receive even though I tendered payment for every other utility services! Yes, I did refuse to carry my trash to the front curb because publication in the New Madrid Weekly Record stated pickup would be made either by alley or curb side. This publication as I read it, meant that if there were no alleys, as is the case in parts of our city, there would be curb side pick-up and where there were alleys pick up would be made in said alleys. I do not remember reading any limitations being put on which alleys they would or would not pick up in. I have an alley beside my res.: which the city refuses to recognize as an alley, but calls it a 25 ft. no mans land, Yes it is a dead end alley, but it is still on the city maps and the city board checked records as far back as 1951 and could not find any record of this 25 ft. ?(alley) ever being abandoned. We now have to the rear of the huse pick-up for an additional charge of $1.25 or $3.50 per mo. and you must request this service from the city before receiving same. But even this was not made available to us until a group of citizens approached the Mayor and city board on the issues, and later it was published as, "Madrid board hears gripes on garbage and sewer problems."

Thank you
Bob Daniels
New Madrid Citizen

Today in U. S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 20, the 324th day of 1974. There are 41 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, 24 Nazi leaders were put on trial before an international war crimes tribunal at Nuernberg, Germany.

On this date:

In 1818, the South American liberator, Simon Bolivar, declared Venezuela independent of Spain.

In 1870, German troops surrounded Paris during the Franco-Prussian War.

In 1893, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Great Lakes and their connecting waters were high seas.

In 1917, the World War I Battle of Cambria began in France.

In 1942, the Alaska highway across Canada was formally opened.

In 1947, Princess Elizabeth of Britain married Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten in a ceremony at Westminiter Abbey in London.

Ten years ago: Chairman Roy Howard of the Scripps-Howard newspapers died in New York at the age of 82.

Five years ago: Vice President Spiro Agnew made a broad attack against the news media, singling out the New York Times and the Washington Post for his harshest criticism.

One year ago: The Senate Rules Committee approved the Nomination of Gerald Ford as Vice President after the resignation of Agnew.

Today's birthday: Actress Gene Tierney is 54.

Thought for today: We don't seem to be able to check crime, so why not legalize it and then tax it out of business — Will Rogers, American humorist, 1879-1935.

Weapon may be Garrison link

KENNETT - Mystery still surrounds the Sept. 8 murder of Lee Ann Garrison, the attractive mother of four children who was found slain in her stately mansion on the south end of this Dunklin County city.

Since her body was discovered, Missouri law enforcement authorities have pressed for the return of the 32-year old woman's ex-husband, Dr. Norman A. Garrison Jr., from Cornith, Miss., to face a first-degree murder charge.

A gun, suspected of being the possible murder weapon, was recovered last week from a Parma Man arrested in Somerville, Tenn., for armed robbery and kidnaping.

Hobert Goodman was arrested and charged by Fayette County, Tenn., authorities Nov. 14 following a chase in which he tried to elude police who sought him in connection with the robbery of a Moscow, Tenn. service station and abduction of the station owner's wife.

Goodman, who was released from the Missouri State Penitentiary in October after serving seven years on an armed robbery charge from Dunklin County, told authorities that he stole the 22-caliber revolver in Memphis and has denied any knowledge of the Garrison slaying.

"Man. . . I don't know those people," Goodman said. "I've only read about that (killing) in the papers."

The pistol, with five cartridges and an empty hull still in the cylinder, showed definite signs of some kind of stain around the butt and hammer and particles of lint and hair inside the handles.

Dunklin County authorities had speculated that Mrs. Garrison had been killed with her own gun, which turned up missing after she was found brutally beaten and shot about mid-morning by her 13-year-old daughter by a previous marriage. According to the autopsy report, she had V-shaped marks about her head, which indicated that she was possibly beaten with an object.

Dr. Garrison, when questioned about his wife's gun, said that he had obtained a 32-caliber Smith and Wesson model for her sometime before their separation.

A piece of a gun handle, found near the scene of the crime and believed to be from the murder weapon, was inscribed with the initials H and R. The gun recovered in Tennessee, a Harrison-Richardson model, was reported stolen in Sidney, Neb., in 1971.

A definite distinction could be noticed from the handles on the gun. Neither seemed to fit well and one looked newer than the other. The crews holding the handles were badly worn.

The Daily Standard has learned of an apparent assassination attempt against Dr. Garrison on the same evening that Goodman was arrested some 75 miles from Cornith.

Alcorn County, Miss., authorities told of having two men under serveillance that night, but would not divuldge any names or other information.

Goodman told authorities he stole the gun in Memphis earlier in the day from a parked car. "I saw the barrel sticking out of a sack and opened the door and took it," Goodman said.

When arrested, he had some loose cartridges in his pocket and a box of shells.

Market robbed of $94

A lone gunman took $94 from the E-Z Food Mart, 903 Davis Blvd., about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, according to police.

Police said a black male with a woman's stocking pulled over his face entered the store through the rear entrance and ordered an employee, Johnny Rodgers, 110 Adams St., to give him the money. The man was carrying a small-caliber pistol.

Rodgers gave him the money and the man fled out the rear door. He was last seen running west.

Police picked up two suspects a short time later in a car seen leaving the area.

Police now report the two had nothing to do with the robbery, but are being held for investigation of marijuana possession. Police said they would know later today whether the substance found in the car was actually marijuana.

Work begins on emergency bills

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—A fourth bill to revise the state's interest laws was introduced today by Rep. Bob Griffin as the legislature opened the second day of a special session.

The House sent two previously introduced bills rasing the state's 8 per cent interest ceiling, the lowest in the nation, to the banking committee and an emergency appropriations bill for the Social Services Department and the secretary of state to the Appropriations Committee.

Hearings on the funding measure were to start later today while the usury bills were not expected to receive committee consideration until next week.

The Senate, going back to work just before noon, sent its bill revising the usury law to the Banking Committee, which had scheduled an afternoon hearing.

The latest interest rate-related bill sponsored by the Cameron Democrat calls for raising the interest rate to be paid on court-ordered judgments from 6 per cent to 8 per cent.

That interest is paid under state law on judgments from the time they are ordered by the court until they are actually paid.

The session, the fourth this year, opened Tuesday with Gov. Christopher S. Bond expanding his original call to include an appropriation for implementation of the revised campaign financing law, which was overwhelmingly approved by voters Nov. 5.

That measure calls for three reports covering contributions and expenses of candidates who spend more than $500 in their campaign and for reports of economic status from all candidates.

Although Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick has said it will cost about $200,000 to implement the law through next June, the end of the fiscal year, the bill introduced in the House by Rep. Clarence Heflin, D-Independence, vice chairman of the Appropriations Committee, calls for funding of only $97,449.

"Although the expenses of this new law will not be large at first," Bond said in his message to the legislature, "there is the need to provide assistance for the filing of reports, for staff for the commission and for the costs incurred in publication of notices for the election."

Bond also indicated that he expected the Missouri Election Commission, which will oversee the law, to be established by Jan. 1, the date the measure goes into effect. Eighteen persons must be nominated by the state Supreme Court and six appointed by the governor to the commission.

The Senate bill on the usury law, co-sponsored by four senators including Democratic banker Al Spradling of Cape Girardeau, chairman of the Banking Committee, calls for removal of any ceiling on home loan mortgages, as does one of the House bills, sponsored by Minority Floor Leader Robert Snyder of Kirkwood.

Snyder's proposal sets a 10 per cent ceiling on loans between $500 and $5,000 while the Senate measure raises the ceiling to 15 per cent on loans between $500 and $2,500.

The second House bill, introduced by Speaker Pro Tem Richard DeCoster of Canton, merely raises the interest ceiling on all loans over $500 to 10 per cent and is similar to a bill that failed to gain approval in the regular legislative session this year.

Snyder's bill, drafted by the governor's office, and the Senate proposal both include:

—No ceiling on first deeds of trust for real estate or mobile homes.

—No ceiling on corporation loans, which are exempt under the current law.

—No ceiling on interest for loans in excess of $5,000 made to small businesses.

—No ceiling on interest on loans over $5,000 where stock or other negotiable instruments are used as collateral.

—Elimination of points, which have been used, according to officials, as a way of circumventing the 8 per cent ceiling. There would be no restriction, however, on points charged in reselling mortgages financed by a federal agency.

DeCoster's bill treats points as part of the interest, which would be limited to no more than 10 per cent.

"I recognize in proposing increases in statutory interest rates that consumers will have, in many cases, to pay more for loans in Missouri," the governor said, "but they should be able to obtain loans which would otherwise be unavailable."

Senate President Pro Tem William Cason of Clinton said consideration of about 100 appointments made by the governor in the wake of state reorganization this summer will be considered beginning Monday.

He estimated that more than 90 of them will be handled within 10 days but that six or seven, including the most controversial, could take the maximum 30-day statutory period.

Among those appointments needing Senate confirmation that are expected to run into opposition are those of Commissioner of Administration Robert James and Agriculture Director James Boillot, who has been criticized for his role in leasing the state fairgrounds for the ill-fated Ozark music festival last July.

Michigan man dies of accident injuries

A Michigan man was fatally injured, four persons were seriously injured and three received minor injuries in four area traffic accidents Tuesday, the highway patrol announced today.

John Newton, 34, of Detroit, Mich., was critically injured at 9:20 a.m. Tuesday on Highway 60 five miles east of Charleston.

He died at 3:45 p.m. Tuesday after being admitted to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Rufus Garland Price, 30, of Detroit, Mich., rounded a curve, went out of control, crossed the centerline and struck head- on with a pick- up truck driven by Phillip Daniel Blackman, 21, of Charleston who was traveling east. Price received serious injuries and Blackman received minor injuries.

A passenger in Price's car, Leon Moore, 16, of Detroit, and a passenger in Blackman's car, Cecil Dewey Health, 69, of East Prairie were also seriously injured.

All were taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

A St. Francis, Ark., man was seriously injured in an accident at 6:30 a.m. Tuesday on Highway 53 one mile south of Qulin.

The accident occurred when Lewis, who was traveling north fell asleep at the wheel. His car crossed the center line and struck a southbound pick-up truck driven by Richard Wayne Wright, 24, of Poplar Bluff.

Lewis was taken to the Poplar Bluff Hospital.

Myrtle Cox, 76, of Qulin received minor injuries at 3:40 p.m. Tuesday one mile north of Qulin on a county road.

The accident occurred when a southbound car driven by Walter Suiter, 18, of Qulin approached a blind intersection and struck the rear of an eastbound car driven by Oren Cox, 62, of Qulin.

Suzanne M. Paynic of Roxana, Ill., received minor injuries at 12:15 a.m. today five miles east of Doniphan on U.S. 160 in a one- vehicle accident.

According to the patrol, the accident occurred when a car driven by Miss Paynic rounded a curve at a high rate of speed and struck a bridge railing.

School bond approved

DEXTER-- Voters in the Dexter school district Tuesday approved a $1.3 million bond issue in a special election.

Voting in favor of the issue were 880 persons and opposing it, 113. Funds from the bond will be used to construct a new junior high school and add five additional classrooms to the present senior high school.

The new school will be built on a 17- acre tract just south of the present high school.

Liquor store holdup nets $300 to $400

NEW MADRID - Robert's Sundries Liquor Store, 317 Main St., Tuesday night became one of the latest marks in a series of armed robberies in the Bootheel when a lone white male armed with a revolver made off with between $300 and $400.

City Marshal Virgil "Flip" Dees said the man, who appeared to be in his early 20s, entered the store about 6:15 p.m. and asked the clerk, Miss Estelle Hendricks, for a six pack of beer. When she asked him for identification, he pulled the gun from under his jacket and asked for the money, Dees reported. The robber was described as 5 foot 8 inches tall, weighed 150 pounds, with dark long hair. He was reportedly wearing dark clothing.

Baugher critically injured in accident

Loy Baugher, 56, 318 Edmondson Drive, was critically injured at 5:40 p.m. Tuesday when his car slammed into the rear of a two-ton truck on North Main Street.

Baugher was in the intensive care unit at Missouri Delta Community Hospital this morning suffering from head and chest injuries.

Baugher is a retired photographer and formerly operated the Baugher Studio on South Main Street.

Baugher's car struck the back of a farm implement truck driven by Carl Thomas Mitchell, 16, of Central City, Ky., while the truck was stopped in the northbound lane of North Main Street waiting to turn into the El Capri Motel parking lot.

Police said Baugher was trapped inside the wreckage for 30 minutes before he could be freed by members of the Sikeston Volunteer Rescue Squad. His car slid partially under the bed of the truck.

A fire truck was called to hose down spilled gasoline around the wreckage.

55 die in air crash

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A Lufthansa jumbo jetliner crashed and burned today on take off from Nairobi airport and at least 55 persons were reported dead. The airline said 96 persons survived the first fatal crash of a Boeing 747, three-fourths of them virtually uninjured.

The West German airline's Nairobi manager, Helmuth Wolff, said 55 of the 157 persons aboard were known dead and six were missing. He said 73 persons from the flight were at a Nairobi hotel unhurt. The other survivors were in Nairobi hospitals.

Commission postpones flood insurance decision

The Planning and Zoning Commission postponed making any recommendations on the future of federally subsidized low cost flood insurance in the city, although it was made clear at the Tuesday night meeting that Sikeston would be forced to join the program.

Attending the meeting were a number of Sikeston bankers and realtors and two representatives from the Kansas City office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Ben Stephenson and Gary McClure.

The federal program requires that flood insurance be purchased by anyone taking out a federally backed loan for building or buying a house in a flood prone area.

In order to qualify for the insurance, the builder of a new house in flood areas of Sikeston would have to raise the level of the house by three feet, and in some cases by five feet. In a few areas, the house might have to be built even higher.

Industrial and commercial buildings built in the area would have to be flood-proofed to the flood level.

The flood prone areas discussed are those subject to flooding on a 100- year basis according to government statistics.

Those areas are mostly located east of Ingram Street.

The city first indicated it was interested in flood insurance in 1971 and asked the government to do a study showing the areas of the city subject to the 100- year flood level.

Commerce woman cheated by con men

BENTON — The Scott County sheriff's department and Cape Girardeau County officials are conducting a joint investigation of a confidence game in which an elderly Commerce woman was cheated out of about $3,500 over a three-month period, Scott County Sheriff John Dennis said today.

The game is an old one. Dennis explained that a man approached the woman and tried to convince her that several odd jobs needed to be done -- such as installation or repair of a lightning rod and extermination of termites. The confidence man first quoted a small fee for the job,, then demanded a lot more, saying it was a bigger job than expected.

Many times such jobs are not necessary at all, stated Dennis, who said the investigation found a point where the confidence man cut the wire leading from the lightning rod to the ground, then told the victim the lightning rod was broken.

Dennis said the same method of operation has been used in reported attempts to con people in

Officials see future housing level

City officials Tuesday showed representatives from the Department of Housing and Urban Development how high houses would have to be built on Crowe Place in order to qualify for federal flood insurance. The stake (inside box) indicates that the height of the first floor of any house built on the property would have to be about two feet above the ground. Viewing the height of the stake, from left, are Bill Whitlock, assistant city manager; Gary McClure of Kansas City, HUD representative; and City Manager Charles Church. (Daily standard photo)

FOILING TOO
NOSEY SHOPPERS

Ever bring home a jar of jelly or baby foot from the store only to discover that some other shopper had "inspected" it, maybe even sampled it?

That kind of experience will be a thing of the past thanks to one of those perfectly simple inventions that become so obvious once we see them.

Dairy Cap Corp. of Jamaica, N.Y., has brought out a devide it claims makes standard metal or plastic screw-on caps for bottles and jars tamper proof.

The device, called "Protecto-Cap," is a plastic ring which snaps on over the conventional screw cap. Since it is impossible to turn the screw cap with the ring on it (the ring slips), the overcap provides visual proof that the undercap has not been removed. To open a jar or bottle with a screw cap, a consumer must first remove the overcap by stripping away a molded pull tap.

The Protecto-Cap won't, of course, stop people from opening jars in stores if they want to. But it will prevent others from unwittingly purchasing a product that somebody else has stuck his finger or nose into.

THE CBS COVERUP
Part II of a series

Accusations that the television media has been "slanting the news" are not new. Hundreds of complaints have been made and many books and articles have cited abuses (The News Twisters, by Edith Efron; News From Nowhere, by Edward J. Epstein, and others). Now, however, the two-year study in depth made by the Institute for American Strategy has resulted in a 209-page report which more than confirms the worst fears of television news critics.

Professor Whittle Johnston of the Department of Government, University of Virginia, said of the report: "TV and National Defense is a straightforward analysis of an issue that should concern all Americans. It shows not only what events CBS News thought it important to report, but — of even greater significance — those events CBS failed to report."

In other words, the findings were that CBS did not simply "slant" the news; more than that, CBS covered up those news stories which did not fit its pre-conceived ideas of what a news story ought to tell. Forgotten, apparently, was the public's right to hear a full spectrum of opinion on the vital subject of national defense.

For example, relative to news of the Vietnam War, the scholars who directed the study for the Institute for American Strategy examined the amount of time and attention CBS gave to three viewpoints concerning the war. Viewpoint A: That the U.S. should take the war to the enemy, that the South Vietnamese government was sufficiently responsive, enjoyed fairly broad popular support, and merited strong U. S. assistance; that the North Vietnamese government is dictatorial, repressive, and seeks to conquer South Vietnam and breaks international agreements.

Viewpoint B was essentially the Administration's position, namely, that the U.S. should withdraw its manpower but help Saigon logistically to assume the responsibility for the fighting; and that the U.S. should rely on diplomatic pressure to insure that the North Vietnamese government keep its treaty commitments.

Viewpoint C, on the other hand, held that the U.S. should withdraw as fast as possible regardless of the effect on South Vietnam; that the South Vietnamese government was corrupt, repressive, dictatorial, and unworthy of U.S. aid; and that the North Vietnamese Government, while dictatorial, was fighting a just war to unite the Vietnamese people and could be expected to keep international agreements.

The Institute study team found that in 1972, CBS Evening News televised 1,719 sentences relative to Vietnam, and that of these, the ratio of Viewpoint C against Viewpoint A was 48 to one. Of these 1,719 sentences, 1,280 could be identified by the name of the source. For example, 15 Administration spokesmen expressed 250 viewpoints, all of them in the "B" classification. Thirty-nine Congressional sources expressed 48 "B" viewpoints, 218 "C" viewpoints, but none were quoted with an "A" viewpoint. The score with CBS newsmen themselves was even more lopsided. Their sixteen spokesmen expressed "C" viewpoints, 11 "B" (or Administration) viewpoints, but only one "A" viewpoint.

Sixty other Americans, including ten activists, were quoted in 290 CBS News sentences. Of these sixty, only one — Governor George Wallace of Alabama — expressed an "A" viewpoint. Of the others, CBS televised 220 "C" viewpoints by such individuals as Father Daniel Berrigan, Ramsey Clark, Rennie Davis, David Dellinger, Daniel Ellsberg, Jane Fonda, Clark Clifford, David Livingston, Sargent Shriver, George Wald, and others.

Thousands of reputable Americans, many of them outstanding authorities in their own right and certainly of newsworthy attention, held viewpoint "A", and could see no advantage for America in either a military stalemate or diplomatic appeasement. Why is it that in an entire year of CBS evening newscasting, only one person was allowed by CBS News to express that viewpoint; Why were all others suppressed;

This is a question that demands an answer, and the answer must come from the one man most responsible, CBS News President Richard Salant.

NAM STRESSING 3 PRIORITIES ON ENVIRONMENT

Three major issues need solution in the environmental field, Daniel W. Cannon, National Association of Manufacturers' director of environmental affairs told environmental executives in Los Angeles.

The first issue relates to the restrictions on the sulphur content of fuels. The Environmental Protection Agency has stated that "in some quarters the shift from high to low sulphur content fuel is considered to be a major factor in the energy crisis that we face today and over the next decade."

The EPA is working with the states to relax their restrictions, but Mr. Cannon asserts that Congress should amend the Clean Air Act to make sure that sulphur restrictions are in accord with the present energy situation.

The second issue arises out of the "non-degradation" court decision that there can be no significant deterioration of air quality under the Clean Air Act even though national standards are not violated, he said.

This decision would prevent growth in population, commercial development, industrialization and power generation in many areas.

The third issue, Mr. Cannon said, relates to the National Environmental Policy Act which has been used to block or delay many energy development projects such as the Trans-Alaska Pipeline, nuclear power plant operation and oil and gas leasing on the outer continental shelf. Congress should amend the NEPA to make the Council on Environmental Quality the judge of the adequacy of these statements rather than the federal courts, he concluded.

Small Business
In SBA Program

This is the third year that small businessmen who have received assistance from the U.S. Small Business Administration has also received management advice from senior and graduate students at 150 schools of business administration.

According to all concerned, everyone has benefited. The troubled businesses have received advice in recordkeeping, accounting procedures, advertising, and sales promotion. The students benefit from the practical experience. And the Small Business Administration benefits by preventing defaults on the loans which it has made.

The SBA calls the program a good example of private sector involvement with government. Moreover, the program has influenced 53 per cent of participating students toward small business ownership and management.

NATURAL DISASTERS LEAVE LASTING SCARS

On April 3, 1974, what may have been the largest storm of its kind ever observed on earth struck Xenia, Ohio.

In two minutes, almost half the seven-square-mile town was destroyed by winds clocked at 318 miles an hour. Twenty-five people were killed quickly; seven others died later in hospitals. About 2,500 were injured.

The physical damage left in the wake of this monster tornado will eventually be erased. The ravages it left in the minds of the survivors may never be.

Even though the majority of the residents of Xenia were unharmed, most even with their property intact, no one completely escaped the effects of the tornado, writes Don A. Schanche in Today's Health magazine.

"Such natural disasters seem invariably to suck an emotional storm in their wake that frequently cuts a wider swath than the disaster itself," he writes. "In this psychological aftermath, the nonvictims often suffer as much, if not more, than the direct victims of the tragedy."

According to Ann S. Kliman, a psychologist and disaster expert who was called to Xenia after the storm to consult with local mental health authorities, direct victims usually respond to a disaster by an increase in anxiety reactions, such as fear of another disaster, feelings of being overwhelmed, feelings of depression and rage and inability to cope, or frenetic coping activity.

Indirect victims often respond by feeling conscious guilt — guilt that they escaped when others didn't — and by an increase in guilt-related and stress- induced physical symptoms, accidents and explosive arguments at home, in school or on the job.

It may be years before the full extent of post-tornado reactions unfolds in Xenia, says Schanche.

A similar story is told about another sudden disaster — the collapse of a coal mine dam and the flooding of communities along 20 miles of Buffalo Creek in West Virginia in February, 1972.

A major psychiatric study conducted by 60 psychiatrists, psychologists and social case workers from the University of Cincinnati found "serious psychological impairment" in nearly every survivor.

The study helped bring about a recent landmark financial settlement to survivors by the Buffalo Mining Company, at $13.5 million the largest ever granted by a court for psychological damages.

"Our findings," says UFC psychiatrist Dr. James L. Titchener, "were that the disaster had acute effects, causing much anxiety and fear with sleep disturbances and physiological disorder, shock and grief reactions, disorganization of thinking and behavior."

Wen they came to the area two years after the disaster, the investigators found continuing anxiety focussing on nights when there is rain or stormy conditions. As in Xenia, the survivors felt guilt and shame about their survival. And also as in Xenia, there had been a terrific impact on the children, both those who witnessed the disaster and those observing the effects of it on their parents.

The psychological trauma for most of the Buffalo Creek survivors is becoming entrenched as time passes, rather than lessening, says Titchener.

For all our boasting about our "conquest" of nature, it would seem that we modern human beings are as much at the mercy of elemental forces as were our primitive ancestors, who had far less understanding of or control over them.

ESSENTIAL TO NATIONAL STABILITY

Foreign trade, at one time merely a couple of words in the dictionary to a lot of people, is now a matter of prime interest to everyone. Nearly everyone now realizes that if the U. S. is to remain a prosperous nation, it must also remain competitive in world markets.

The need to stimulate U. S. participation in international commerce was one of the compelling reasons for adoption by Congress of a 10-year program to revitalize the U. S. Merchant Marine -- not only with new-technology cargo vessels, but with a strengthened fleet of tankers to meet growing demands for the movement of petroleum. As never before, tankers are a vital tool of the energy industry which must import increased amounts of petroleum to supplement domestic supplies. As the chairman of the Federal Maritime Commission has said: "... We are going to be using more oil all the time -- from Alaska -- from overseas. It just makes sense for our country to be independent of foreign- registered ships for our oil and gas." The same can be said for the other element of the U. S. Merchant Marine -- the cargo ships of new design and low-cost operation. They are becoming an integral part of a worldwide, intermodular transportation system -- a system that should guarantee American maritime leadership and the means of reaching global market.

No matter what other measures are taken to assure economic stability, none is more important than a U. S. merchant fleet second to none -- a fleet that includes the cargo vessels and tankers are that the keys to the Earth's storehouse of goods and resources.

AN ACADEMIC ARGUMENT

Cost of promotion and advertising has long been a target of shortsighted theorists who conclude that every dime spent by a merchant to attract customers is a dime taken out of the pockets of consumers. They accept the fact of America's magnificent retail, mass distribution system, but never analyze how it came into being and what is necessary to sustain it. The truth is that a retail store is something like a family auto. It takes energy to keep it going. In the case of the retailer that energy is supplied by competent management, and promotion and advertising.

The endless argument over the cost of promotion is, in reality, academic. Numerous surveys of the trading stamp industry have shown pretty conclusively that this particular form of promotion has little or no measurable effect on prices. As to the question of whether trading stamps provide "something instead of nothing" for consumers, a report in the Journal of Retailing, published by New York University Institute of Retail Management, on "The Value of Trading Stamps as Measured by Retail Prices, "is illuminating. It finds that in Denver, Colorado-- a representative U.S. city-- a book of trading stamps of a more or less typical trading stamp concern is worth an average of $3.11, in terms of the retail price of goods at the trading stamp company's redemption center. This bears out the oft repeated statement that, on the average, for every dollar merchants spend on trading stamps, customers get redemption merchandise with a retail value of $1.10.

Quite literally, consumers who receive trading stamps are getting something instead of nothing. Were it not for forms of promotion, such as trading stamps and the advertising that fuels the mass movement of goods at minimum prices, the retail distribution system, as we know it, would gradually grind to a halt-- like a car running out of gas.

CHEAP SCALP JOB

AN ARDENT LOVER, paying court to a beautiful blonde, cornered his girl friend's young brother. "Billy," he said, "how'd you like to earn a dollar?"

"Sure! What do I have to do for it?"

Explained the suitor, "I'll give you a dollar for one lock of your sister's beautiful hair."

"You must be some kind of a nut," said Billy. "Give me ten bucks and I'll get you the whole wig."

"CAN YOU HEAR THE MUSIC?"

A NUMBER of years ago, Thomas Dreier, philosopher and writer, penned a little story about Christmas that has become a classic. There is inspiration and deep truth in it for these times and all times. Here is the story:

The parents had taken their little boy with them on a Christmas shopping tour. As they were about to enter the swinging door of a big department store the little boy stopped and said, "Oh, listen to the music!"

His parents listened. They heard no music. All they heard was the honking of the automobiles and the roar of their engines, the sound of thousands of shoes scraping the sidewalk, the loud talk of men and women, the swish of the doors as they turned, and the raucous city noises.

But the little boy repeated, "Listen! Can't you hear the beautiful music?"

And the parents, trying with all their might, kept the rattle and roar and racket out of their ears, and suddenly, as if by some magic, they heard the sound of little silver bells tinkling. Looking up, they saw the toy bells above the doorway of the store. Once heard, the little bells seemed to become as loud as cathedral chimes.

In these days of change, unrest, and insecurity, too many of us fail to hear the tiny silver bells of the things that are unchanging and secure. There are truths that seek to find their way into our minds and hearts. We shut them out by listening only to the clamor of what is temporary. We fail to hear the real music.

"I'm afraid your little brother is shy," said the hostess at a birthday party. "He hasn't moved from that one place all afternoon."

"No, ma'am," explained the boy's elder sister, "he's not shy. It's just that he's never had a necktie on before, and he thinks he's tied to something."

A man hired a boat and fishing guide for a float trip down the river. As they were drifting along, the man noticed a large fire extinguisher in the boat, so he asked the guide, "What's this for?"

"Be careful," warned the guide. "This is a wooden boat and when we drift around the next bend there is a fish so big that if you hook him, he will take us back upstream so fast it may set the bottom of the boat on fire! That's what the extinguisher is for!"

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
The Human Side

WASHINGTON--Behind the dull statistics, which measure our deepening economic distress, is a poingant human drama. We have conducted our own economic survey to get the human side of the story.

We have sent reporters into the nation's most fashionable neighborhoods and its most scrubby ghettos. We have spoken to the gentle folks on Sen. James Eastland's plantation in Sunflower County, Miss. And we have talked to their impoverished neighbors, who sit on creaking porches dull eyes and gnawing hunger pains. And we have made spot chekcs on economic conditions across America.

Everywhere, people are complaining about hard times. New York brokers, despairing over the stock market slump are pulling out of their houses and heading South. They hope to find better financial opportunities in Atlanta and Houston.

Ghetto blacks, reversing the previous flow, are also drifting southward. Their families had tended the fields in the Deep South since slaves days. Then, suddenly, they were made obsolete by tractors and automatic cotton-pickers. Many them moved northward to fill up the ghettos of the big cities. They now find life in the ghettos so bleak, so bitter, that those who can scrape up the bus fare are heading back home.

Probably the worst off are the migrant farm laborers, the thousands of faceless men and women and their anonymous children who move with the harvest, stopping only long enough to pick a crop and to earn enough to subsist until the next stop.

The average stoop laborer, according to United Farm Workers official Gilbert Padilla, earns a meager $3,000 a year. For these wandering workers, who move from crop to crop in beat-up trucks, the gasoline price rise has been a disaster.

Even more serious has been the increase in the price of beans from 18 to 69 cents a pound. Many migrant workers, who help make America the best fed nation nation in history, are themselves undernourished. Some are too poor to afford even the government stamps to buy cut-price food, and exist on a diet of starches and water.

Some have settled in California's Sunkist country, where life is a bit better. They live in grower-owned mobile trailers and wooden houses on the edges of the groves.

The ranchers like to keep their stoop workers stooped and submissive. As one technique for keeping them down on the farm at the prevailing wages, the landowners welcome peddlers driving station wagons piled with tacky merchandise. The credit sales help hold the laborers in financial bondage.

Not far from this poverty, growers live in baronial splendor, with poolside parties, skeet shooting and social soirees. But if the tinkling of highball glasses can be heard in their fine houses, there is also much grumbling and grousing. One of the managers of the magnificent Limoneira Ranch complained to us that the orange harvest was off 25 per cent, labor costs are up 15 per cent and profits are down 50 per cent.

On the 5,800 acres of Sen. James Eastland's plantation outside Doddsville, Miss., there is also deepening gloom. "We've had a lot of heavy rains," one of the senator's womenfolk complained to my associate George Clifford. And when the bolls get sodden, she averred, you can't pick much cotton.

"The heavy machinery we're using now can't get on the fields do the picking she said. "Several of the other counties around here have been designated as natural disaster areas, but I don't believe Sunflower County has qualified."

If the county should qualify for federal emergency funds, it won't be the first time Sen. Eastland has collected from the government for not being able to harvest. In recent years, he has stashed away hundreds of thousands of dollars from Washington in price supports for cotton he did not plant. The money was a fringe benefit from the laws he helped to write as the single most powerful man in the Senate.

Others living on the black soil of the delta, however, measure their government handouts in tens and twenties, not hundreds of thousands. They are the sharecroppers and the farm hands, who eke out a living running the machinery in the cotton fields. The most they can earn, when they can find work, is $2 an hour. "I haven't heard of none that are getting higher," one of the senator's less-blessed neighbors told us.

Doctors at Mt. Bayou hospital, not far from Eastland's plantation, told us that despite the federal food stamp program, they still treat "a lot of cases of malnutrition."

"Every day," said one doctor, "I see people who have no health insurance and no medicaid. And they have no food, either."

Not even the sugar growers, whose prices for raw sugar have shot up from 4.5 cents a pound three years ago to 67.2 cents a pound today, are happy.

George Wedgworth, head of the Sugar Cane Growers Cooperative, representing about 150 farms between the southern edge of Lake Okeechobee and the Everglades in southern Florida, grumbled about government controls. "Consumers are going to have to pay more," he said.

Some 8,000 workers have been imported from the West Indies for the back-breaking harvest, which is just beginning. American agricultural workers won't hack down the sugar cane with heavy machetes for the minimum $2.45 an hour. "You and I probably wouldn't last a day." Wedgworth said. "But those accustomed to it prefer being here to working in the West Indies."

In sum, the economic downturn isn't merely a question of dollars. It is an issue of human misery.

H.L. Hunt

If Communists could produce
The World Food Conference at Rome is yielding the usual fruits of such political conferences aimed at solving economic bickering and inaction. The capitalist farmers in the world are the only ones who can produce a surplus. That means the United States, Canada, and Australia; yet the farmers of these three nations are having taken from them and are giving up -- more of their freedom as enterprisers all the time.

If the communists could produce, they would be on the attack with a well-organized information program explaining to the world how the communist system is the only one which can feed its people, and all the world needs to do is to adopt communism and stop being hungry.

The fact is, of course, that the communist system cannot and never has produced enough to feed its people. Every communist-socialist nation, even those like Russia which once had agricultural surpluses, eventually finds itself unable to feed its own people, much less rescue the starving in other lands.

The United States should be on the offensive at the World Food Conference, not apologetic. We should be emphasizing that it is socialism and collectivism which are starving people, not capitalism. Capitalism feeds people. The whole world, including many non-producing intellectuals and bureaucrats in our own land, seems intent on destroying the personal enterprise, profitable profitmotive system which has fed so many most of the world starves under anti-capitalist systems. The situation defies all reason. HLH

Big Wall

The Great Pyramid built by Khufu (Cheops) ca. 2550 B.C. was built on a square base, with an area of 13 acres, or seven average-sized city blocks. The six million tons of material used in the construction would, as Napoleon figured in 1798, be enough to build a 10-foot wall around the whole of France. Cut into standard-sized bricks and laid end-to-end, the Great Pyramid would reach from the earth to the moon.

Gillyflower used for medicine

This Thanksgiving, as people decorate tables and homes with flowers and fruits in anticipation of a happy family dinner, those flowers hold reminder that there are many reasons to be thankful for a land that remains beautiful in spite of pollution, and bountiful in spite of inflation.

The pilgrims had little sugar with which to sweeten the tart wild berries they gathered during the early years while taming the wilderness. And their gardens were planted not for pleasure but for ingredients urgently needed for medicine, flavorings, dyes for hand-woven cloth, and even insect repellents.

Many plants that the early colonists brought from the old world in seed or root form have become favorite flowers today, according to the Society of American Florists.

For example, the "clove gillyflower" used for many medicinal purposes by colonial dames is today's carnation. And although the carnation that florists carry today has developed into a handsome, manypetaled flower, it still retains the spicy fragrance that perfumed the colonial homemaker's garden.

Another flower that links today with the Pilgrims is the "everlasting" — a flower the colonial ladies picked, hung to dry in a dark corner, and used in the home to protect precious hand-woven clothing and blankets from moths. Later, when the early rigors of settling the land were over, colonial ladies used "everlastings" in bouquets of dried flowers and leaves to add color and decoration to their homes in winter.

Today, "everlastings" are used in much the same way — for their beauty and form, and for their pleasing reminder, when nature lies dormant, that each season has its turn and the barren fields will soon be renewed with the bright flowers of spring.

So as flowers and fruits are placed upon Thanksgiving tables, people need not wonder whether a colonial Elizabeth or Matilda, far from her birthland and family, once gave a sigh of thanks for the pleasing color and fragrance of her "gillyflowers" and "everlastings" as well as for their practical value.

Tips for buying sewing machines

Area Textiles and Clothing Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — Over 50 million people are doing home sewing, and this figure will probably increase according to United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) statistics.

This number includes many home sewers who are planning on purchasing a new sewing machine. Selecting a sewing machine that will be useful as a long time investment is a very important consideration.

No one can tell a person which machine to buy, but here are some suggestions to help you in making this decision.

For the novice it is important to know the four main categories of sewing machines from which to choose: straight stitch basic zigzag, more versatile zigzag, and most versatile zigzag. The choice of machine will depend upon what use one intends to make of it. Complicated machines with features that are not going to be used can prove to be a poor purchase.

Another choice to consider when buying a machine is whether it will be a cabinet model or portable. Where a person plans to sew will help in making this decision.

When shopping try out the machine for good operation, check both the flat bed and open arm models. A feature of the open arm is that it allows for slipping tubular parts of garments such as sleeves, pants legs or cuffs to be pulled over the arm in order to sew them more easily.

Few inventions have proven as valuable to the world as the sewing machine. Regardless of the decision, do not buy a machine on impulse. It is wise to be informed and buy from a reputable dealer.

Illicit sex shatters lives of students

Dear Ann Landers: Where are all those advocates of prenarital sex when it comes time to pick up the pieces after a "momentary mistake"? And what do the advocates do to help prevert such "mistakes"?

Do they tell the kids that though a relationship may be "meaningful" too one partner it may be purely self-satisfaction, an ego trip, or mere condescension on the part of the other?

Do they tell the kids that a "meaningful relationship" may be so meaningful that one partner may have an overwhelming desire to cement that relationship with a child?

Do they tell the kids they should NEVER count on the other person to take precautions--and that to be perfectly safe, both parties should count on themselves?

Do they tell the kids that a girl's most intense desires are very likely to accompany her most fertile time? ("Just this once?")

Do they tell the kids that a person't "love" might be severely dampened by resentment and turn to full-fledged hate should that person feel trapped?

Do they tell the kids that alternative solutions to an unwanted pregnancy are vastly more difficult to handle than coping with the challenges of virginity?

Do they tell the kids that the legality of abortion is insignificant compared to the emotional trauma?

Do they tell the kids that giving up a child for adoption is no simple matter for anyone who has had a "meaningful relationship"?

Do they tell the girls that an out-of-wedlock baby goes far beyond the enjoyment of having a cute little bundle of joy to cuddle and take for a stroll in the perambulator?

Where are those advocates of premarital sex when it's time to mend lives suffering from their advice?--A Shoulder To Cry On

Dear Shoulder: Thank you for a good letter. I'm glad you offered your shoulder to "cry on." Mine is already the wettest in the U.S.A. (Are you listening, students?)

Dear Ann Landers: We came to the United States from the Netherlands a year ago and like it very much. There are two things about your country we cannot understand.

A company that sells fried chicken advertises that it is "finger-lickin' good." In our country, children learn table manners. Licking the fingers is considered vulgar. We do not want our children to imitate this custom. What should we tell them?

The second thing is the way your clergymen run to the front door of the church after the worship service and sermon to collect compliments. They shake hands with all who leave and revel in the high praise of their sermon. This is completely foreign to us and we would like to avoid it. How? "NewAmericans

Dear New: In America it is considered O.K. to eat crisp fried chicken with the hands. If you don't want your children to lick their fingers, tell them to use silverware.

In some churches it is customary for the clergyman to shake hands with the members of his congregation after the service. If this bothers you, take another exit or find another church.

Local girl is student in Kansas

PITTSBURG, Kan. — Nancy Louise Gleason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Gleason, 311 Salcedo Road, Sikeston, Mo., is among 5,409 students from 529 towns in 43 states and 15 foreign countries who have enrolled for the fall semester at Kansas State College of Pittsburg.

The largest representation, totaling 1,295 students, is from the college's home community of Pittsburg and nearby Frontenac. The Kansas City area has the largest representation outside of Pittsburg with a total of 450 students.

A total of 4,774 KSCP students are from a total of 272 towns in Kansas, with 307 from 78 towns in Missouri, 84 from 24 towns in Oklahoma and 171 from 155 towns in 40 other states. Also, 73 students are from 37 town in 15 foreign countries.

Iran leads international students representation at KSCP with 29 enrollees followed by Taiwan with 15 and Thailand with 10. Other countries represented are Canada, Rhodesia, Japan, Pakistan, Hong Kong, India, Sierra Leone, Malaysia, and Nigeria, Germany, Puerto Rico, and Saudia Arabia.

Risco mother throws party for children

RISCO — Mrs. Luther Stokes entertained Nov. 16 with a birthday parety at her home in honor of her children, Telisha and Charles Richard.

Multicolored balloons and happy birthday crepe paper were used in the decorating scheme.

Cake, punch and ice cream were served to the honorees and following guests: Mrs. Barrett Stokes and children and Mrs. Agnes Mertel of Malden, Doris Pearson and Kim and Richard, of Campbell, and Mrs. Donnie Lancaster and Carol and Dana of Risco.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Well, they finally got the buzz out of seat belts.

It took an act of Congress to do it, but at last people will be able to get into their cars and start them without red lights flashing, alarms going off and someone at your elbow snipping, "Well, it's not me, Phyllis, and you're the only other person in the front seat!"

The seat belt alarm system did for marriage what Jane Fonda did for the VFW. That harmless little electronic belch has left in its wake scores of damaged marriages. And it isn't over yet.

As I said to my husband the other day as I crawled into the car, "Something is wrong with my seat. It feels funny."

"That's because you are not sitting on top of your seat belt like you usually do."

"That's not true. I only did that a couple of times."

"Then why can't you wear a bathing suit without embarrassing strap marks?"

"That's easy for you to say," I snapped. "You're used to being restrained. I'm not!"

"What do you mean by a crack like that? After all, I think you should be happy that someone had some consideration for your safety."

"So how come you had them disconnected?"

"Because you became hysterical when you tried to jump out of the car for an errand and cut your dress in half."

"I wasn't hysterical. Just stunned for a moment. If you loved me you wouldn't have taken the buzz out of the seat belts."

"How did you come to that conclusion?"

"Stiller and Meara. They're a comedy team who did a commercial for seat belts. He said he buckled her up because it was a subtle way of telling her he loved her.

"You told me seat belt buzzers were as subtle as a fist coming out of the glove compartment and punching you in the mouth."

"That's before I knew you really didn't care what happened to me. All these years you've just pretended to like my meat loaf."

"What's meat loaf got to do with anything?"

"It has as much to do with anything as your mother wearing a navy blue dress to the wedding."

"So buckle up if you want to. You're over 21."

"Here it comes ... the 'She's-27-days-older-then-I-am-number.'"

"That settles it. Tomorrow I hook up the seat belt buzzer."

"You don't care what I look like in a bathing suit!" I sulked.

Bake sale Local women join scheduled book study group

MORLEY — The Women's Missionary Society of the Church of God will sponsor a bake sale beginning at 9 a.m. Nov. 27 in front of Hagars Food Mart.

Customers can call 262-3572 or 262-3046 to place a special order.

TALLAPOOSA The Tallapoosa Baptist Women joined the Gideon book study group Nov. 14th at the Gideon First Baptist Church. Mrs. Howard English of Scott City presented the program, "How in the World".

Attending from the Tallapoosa Baptist Church were Mrs. Gene Lancaster, Mrs. J. H. Meese, Mrs. Nancy Marlowe, Mrs. Bob Meese and Mrs. Hugh Landers of Risco.

Meetings

TUESDAY

Chapter JU of PEO will meet at 1:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Bill Burch, 658 N. Ranney St.

TUESDAY

The First United Methodist Church bazaar will begin at 9 a.m. in the church fellowship hall. A luncheon will be served from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The boss may think a fellow works late when he only stays at the office because he needs some stamps.

Some women are so contrary they often have ideas of their own.

Women first to use soap,water

MAN'S FIRST DEFENSE

MELROSE PARK, Ill.-- Man may have survived his first 20 million years on earth because he smelled too bad to eat. According to anthropologists, most predatory animals were repelled by his body odor.

It's likely women were the first to take steps against human odor, so they started washing with a substance made from wood ashes and animal fat-- primitive soap-- to deodorize themselves and their loved ones.

Soap- and- water made a comeback during the Industrial Revolution. Then 100 years ago science came up with an effective underarm deodorant, and in 1966 the first feminine hygiene spray was introduced in the United States. Such aids are needed, researchers have found, because without them body odor begins to develop about six hours after bathing.

Salt has a very agreeable taste if a stein of beer is added to half a teaspoonful.

If you are lonely and want some neighbors to call, just start to take a bath.

Martini meals create malnourished husbands

By DR. L.M. HURSH
National Dairy Council Consultant

Has it been long since you asked your husband what he had to eat? Either at a local restaurant, or out of town? It's true, you know, that many men in business get almost as much of their nourishment away from home as at the family table.

We all worry about our children — and whether they get enough to eat. We may not worry enough about just what foods our children are consuming. But do wives, unless their husbands are on reducing diets, know what their spouses eat when they eat out?

As a doctor I suspect we don't know a great deal about what individual men eat. And if you ask them, a lot of men may not remember from day to day what they had either. But observing people in restaurants suggest there may be a lot of meat, potatoes and martini meals. And coffee, of course.

This is not, if true, as it should be.

I have the feeling that most men will get enough calories, whatever they do. So we probably don't have to worry about whether your husband gets enough for energy. The real concern has to be for his not getting too many calories. But at the same time, he must get the nutrients he needs.

Malnutrition, whether by way of gaining too much weight or creating nutrient deficiencies over the long term, is a very subtle thing. It is almost a secret thing. An illness can be triggered by undernourishment. But in looking back, even an illness may not reveal that poor eating habits were a contributing factor.

So we have to approach nutrition on a positive note. If faithfully practiced, sound eating habits will reward you by helping you achieve maximum health. If disease does strike, good nutrition will have you in stronger shape to overcome the illness.

Thus, good nutrition has a lot going for it.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Wooden shakers won't clean up

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — My wooden salt and pepper shakers are so sticky. I have tried using all-purpose cleaners, soap and water and furniture polish but they are still sticky. What can I do? — MRS.H.J.W.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns coffee. The coffee companies could put out hand grinders and packaged coffee beans to help rid the environment of those millions of coffee cans that are discarded. I have an electric coffee mill but try and buy coffee beans. When you can they are sold at a premium because they are so scarce. Freshly ground coffee is superior to that in a can. Packaged seems to lose its aroma before a can is used. Thanks for listening and for the Pointers that have certainly enriched my life. — MRS.A.F.B.

DEAR POLLY — I have help for M.H.S. whose refrigerator shelves have rusted. Sandpaper the rust off thoroughly and then spray paint them with a rustproof paint. This works wonders. I would advise doing this painting outdoors. I find rustproof paint quite offensive. There also is no mess to clean up indoors. — E.C.B.

DEAR POLLY — and M.H.S. — I have a couple of suggestions for those rusted refrigerator shelves. Clean the rust off well and then spray with regular refrigerator odor free paint.

Plastic lace can be purchased at so-called dime and variety stores in the desired width and length and be used to cover such shelves. This looks pretty. Select an open pattern and it will not impair the air circulation in the refrigerator. I also like using it on the shelves since it prevents small containers from tipping in the refrigerator. — MRS.L.E.

DEAR POLLY — Cardboard cylinders from waxed paper and paper towels make excellent mailing tubes for newspapers, magazines and other small things. Just write the address on the cylinder. — BETH.

DEAR POLLY — I do hope a man can invade a woman's world momentarily. The ladies have had discussions about "lime" deposits on their dish drainers. I am unable to determine that such deposits are really lime and think it is more likely a soap or detergent residue. I use an ordinary bathroom spray cleaner on mine, brush it lightly with a vegetable brush to get in the crevices and remove all traces of this residue. Occasionally I then apply a little spray wax and my drainer looks as good as the day I walked in the door with it three years ago. — PAUL B.

Emphasis on 'service' at Tidwell's station

By ALICE JACKSON

For Melvin Tidwell, having his one successful business means working 13 hour days, six days a week. At Tidwell's Service Station, 621 N. Main St., Sikeston, the emphasis is on 'Service'.

"The services we have for customers are more than filling a car's gas tank, though many people still refer to us as a 'filling' station.

"I have two full-time employes and we make emergency service calls. In the station we adjust brakes, mufflers, tires, wash and wax. I usually do the tune-ups. All of us work at whatever jobs are to be done".

Tidwell has owned a service station for 14 years. Keeping good employes is important. Family men make the best workers, he has found. He's also had students from the Sikeston Area Vocational School who were well trained.

"Naturally, no one will take care of your business like you can. I've had maybe six or seven days off in the last eight years. My employes get a paid vacation. I haven't felt I could take off; the customers expect good service and I want to be here to see they get it".

Mrs. Nancy Tidwell is important to her husband's business. She keeps the daily records: gas and oil sold, parts to be ordered, credit card information, the required state and federal information up-to-date. This is in addition to her full-time job at Scott County's Division of Family Services. "The paper work for the station is enormous - sometimes I don't believe it!", she laughed.

The availability of gas and the fluctuation in prices the past year has brought complaints.

"When the major company whose products I sold pulled out of Missouri and I couldn't honor their credit card any more, I lost some customers. Most of my business is in service, though, and our regular customers have been great. They have stayed with me through things like the shortages, pump break-downs, and I really appreciate them. Anyone who comes into the station I consider my customer, and the customer's trust is my living".

Underwriters to meet

The Sikeston UNIT OF THE Missouri Association of Life Underwriters will meet at 11:45 a.m. Thursday at the Grecian Steakhouse.

A special program will be presented by T. Ronald Hahs, district agent for Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Cape Girardeau. His topic is "There is no time like the present." Hahs will discuss life underwriters' new opportunities with the new Federal Pension Reform Act of 1974 and how inflation gives a new mandate in society.

The local association is made up of 40 career life and health insurance underwriters of the Sikeston area who meet the third Thursday of the month. They are basically family insurance conselors who are very much in demand to help Americans keep current with personal insurance needs. The association stresses education and training to keep with the new theme of the National Association of Life Underwriters, "America's 900,000 life and health insurance people ... what we do makes a difference."

Local members are available for information and educational discussions before school and civic groups upon request. For further information, contact the local public relations director, Dwayne C. Lorenz, Chartered Life Underwriter, at 220 N. Main St. in Sikeston.

Any career life insurance agent is invited to visit the monthly meetings or contact Lorenz for more information.

System is success

NORFOLK, Va. — Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp. has announced that their EconoDations nationwide toll-free advance reservation system is a success.

In the first 60 day the system was operational, over 12,000 calls were received. Calls received in October showed a 36 per cent increase over calls received in September. Econo-Travel's toll-free number is 1-800-446-6900.

Lloyd Tarbutton, president of Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp., noted, "We are receiving a much larger response than anticipated. The sharp increase in the second month of operation shows how much the public wants this type advance reservation service." Tarbutton went on to say that many Econo-Travel motels have already enjoyed full capacity nights thanks to EconoDations.

Econo-Travel Motor Hotel Corp., headquartered in Norfolk, Va., is the third largest budget motel chain in the United States, with over 110 motels in operation or under construction. Licenses have been issued for motels in nearly 600 locations in 37 states.

There is an Econo-Travel Motor Hotel in Sikeston, Mo., located at the intersection of Interstate 55 and U. S. Highway 62. Local reservations may be made by calling 471-7400.

250 attend MFA meeting

Approximately 250 persons attended the 1974 annual meeting of the Sikeston MFA Oil Co. Bulk Plant held recently at the Security Federal Saving and Loan Assn. community room 820 N. Main.

Dick Curp, MFA Oil Co. district manager, presented a brief report on the company's 1974 business. Sales were reported at $72 million for the past fiscal year, with net earnings of $4.6 million for the same period.

Ten area men were elected to serve as delegates and alternates for the coming year.

Selected from Sikeston were Arnold Stone, 428 Daniels St., Dempsey Gardner Jr., 802 Taylor St. Frank Stanley Box 297; James Pobst of Route One; Don Schuchart of Route One; C. C. Scott Jr. of Route Three; and Jerry Vann of Route Three.

Other delegates selected were Ben F. Marshall of Blodgett and Billy Gene Johnson and John Byrd of Bertrand.

Dividend will not be declared

KANSAS CITY — The board of directors of Interstate Brands Corporation, at a meeting Nov. 13, voted not to declare a dividend on common stock for the fourth quarter of 1974.

The board did declare the regular quarterly dividend of $1.20 per share on preferred stock. The dividend on preferred stock is payable Dec. 27 to stockholders of record Dec. 10.

With headquarters in Kansas City, IBC is one of the nation's largest bakery-food firms with 31 plants located at strategic locations across the country.

Dentist awarded fellowship

Dr. Dewey E. Urban, 920 Moore St., was among two Missouri dentists recently awarded a fellowship in the Academy of General Dentistry at its recent 12th annual convocation in Washington, D.C.

The Academy of General Dentistry, with some 13,000 members, is the second largest dental organization in the nation. It's primary concern is continuing education of the general practitioner, to keep current with new techniques and treatment.

Fellowship is awarded only after dentists have been members of the Academy for five years and have participated in 500 hours of continuing education courses.

3 elderly men die in Cairo house fire

CAIRO, Ill.- Three elderly men were trapped in a burning Cairo house and suffocated Tuesday, authorities said.

The name of one victim was withheld while officials attempted to notify his family. An official identified the others as Goldie Breck, 67, and James Reed, 85.

Authorities said five men shared the one- story frame house and that two escaped the fire. Three or four firemen donned oxygen masks to enter the burning house in a search for the others but couldn't find them in the dense smoke.

The fire began in a front bedroom near a furnace flue. Two bodies were found near a door and the other was in a bed.

A fireman said, "These were...old- age pensioners living together."

25 fines levied for motor vehichle violations

NEW MADRID— Twenty-five fines totaling $1,182 have been levied on motor vehicle violations by Magistrate Judge Leo Hedgepeth.

A truck operator, Clarence Mack, drew the largest fine, $270 for operating an overweight vehicle of 3,200 pounds.

Robert Lee Henderson was fined $30 for driving without an operator license and Fred Steven Sickrey was assessed $25 fine for failure to stop for stop sign.

Paying $20 fines each were David Lewis Maxwell, failure to stop at stop sign; George Smith, permitting underage operator to drive; George C. Heavener, improper registration and expired vehicle license; and Bennie Joe Thomure, operating vehicle without a cover on load.

Charged with speeding as a result of radar surveillance and forfeiting bonds were: Tommy Ballard, $75; and Richard Allen Milbrandt, Robert Monroe Hottinger, John A. Tate, Sandra Pasquing, Andrew Clayburne Jr., Delores H. Crockett, John Robert Whalin, Willie Lee Conner and Frank Carpenter, $50 each.

Others paying fines on speeding charges include: William W. Segers Jr., $44; George Allen Orr, $35; Julian Moore, $32; Gene Raymond Aufdenberg, Paul Bruce Cholerka and George Dean Castle, $30 each; Larry Ray Clifton, $26; and Richard Lee Nowell, $25.

Only 1 bid submitted on water system

CHARLESTON--- Bridger Plumbing and Heating Co. of Sikeston was the only firm to submit a bid on proposed improvements to the city's water system by the 5 p.m. deadline Tuesday.

City Manager Willis Downs said the bid was higher than the estimated cost tabulated by the city's engineering firm of R.W. Booker and Associates of St. Louis, and would be taken under advisement for reviewing by the City Council and the engineers.

The city has 30 days from the opening of bids to review the bid and investigate the qualifications of the bidder, prior to awarding a contract.

Proposed improvements include the installation of water lines, and modification of the city's water treatment plant and appurtenances.

Martin draws prison terms

BENTON-- Paul David Martin of Sikeston has been sentenced in Circuit Court to two three- year terms in custody of the state department of corrections on separate charges of burglary and stealing. Sentence was handed down after Martin withdrew an earlier plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty.

Charges stemmed from the break- in on July 16 of Maple Oil Co., 1411 W. Malone Ave. in Sikeston, and the theft of $4 in pennies and an unstated amount of cigarettes.

Judge Marshall Craig ordered the two sentences to run concurrently and referred Martin to a probation and parole officer to find if Martin is suitable for parole.

Percy Lee Holman of Sikeston was sentenced to three years in prison after he pleaded guilty to a charge of forcible rape on Oct. 15. He was also referred to the probation and parole officer.

Charles Watson of St. Louis received a six- month suspended jail sentence after he waived formal arraignment and entered a plea of guilty to assaulting Carol B. Porter of Malden on Feb. 13 with a loaded shotgun. He was placed on probation for one year.

Watson was originally charged with felonious assault, the charge was changed to common assault.

Columbus Jefferson of Haywood City was placed on probation for three years on a charge of felonious assault on July 21 by shooting a shotgun at Louise Wiley of Crowder.

Henry A. Powell of Sikeston was placed on probation for three years in connection with the break- in on Aug. 15 of Jimmerson's Service Station, 703 W. Malone Ave., Sikeston and the theft of several cartons of cigarettes.

Eugene Brock Harris of Sikeston was sentenced to one year in the county jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving an automobile owned by Jarvis Motor Co., Inc., of Sikeston on July 15 without permission of the owner.

Robert Eugene Stacy Jr. of Sikeston was placed on probation for three years on a charge of stealing a car from Laura Brown of Chaffee on Aug. 12, and was placed on probation for three years in connection with the theft on Aug. 23 of a car owned by Paul Myers of Sikeston.

James Benjamin Hall of Sikeston waived formal arraignment and entered a plea of not guilty on a charge of possession on Sept. 9 of more than five grams of hashish. Trial was set for Jan. 10.

Ronald Joe Yant of Sikeston waived formal arraignment and entered a plea of guilty to a charge of possession on June 17 of less than 35 grams of marijuana. Imposition of sentence was suspended for one year.

Martin Dudley Allen of Walnut Ridge, Ark., and Danny Campbell and Gary Dikes of Hoxie, Ark., waived formal arraignment and changed their pleas from not guilty to guilty on charges of possession of more than 35 grams of marijuana on May 27. Punishment was taken under advisement and they were referred to a probation and parole officer.

Choruses to present joint fall concert

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The men's and women's choruses of Southeast Missouri State University will present a joint concert Nov. 26 in Academic Hall.

The 8 p.m. program is free and open to the public. Most of the music will be sacred in nature.

The 75-member men's chorus, called the Meistersingers, is directed by Dr. Doyle Dumas, head of the music department.

Soloists during the Meistersingers' portion of the program will be Don Sowers of Houston, Mo., and Chuck Hanna of Illmo Route 1. Accompanist for the Meistersingers is Richard Dale of Oran.

The 85-member women's chorus, called the Cantorae, is directed by Gordon Corwin, instructor of music.

Soloists forthe Cantorae will be Miss Rebecca Perrin of Ellisville, Miss Debbie Buck of Cape Girardeau and Miss Beverly Reece of Malden.

Miss Reece is also the accompanist for the Cantorae.

University to dismiss Nov. 27

CAPE GIRARDEAU —Thanksgiving is only about a week away, and among the many things which most Southeast Missouri State University students are thankful for this year is that the traditional celebration will bring them a four-and-one-half day break from classes.

The university will dismiss classes at noon Nov. 27 and resume at 8 a.m. Dec. 2.

Thanksgiving comes later in the month than usual this year and when the semester begins again there will be only two weeks of classes and a week of final examinations remaining.

The fall term officially ends on Dec. 19, and students will have nearly a month off.

Enrollment for the spring semester will take place Jan. 13 and classes will begin Jan. 14.

Dance group to perform

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Terpsichore, Southeast Missouri State University's modern dance group, will give its first studio performance at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Parker Physical Education Building dance studio.

The group, which presents an annual spring concert, will perform pure dances with no special costuming, lighting, or sets. Sound effects, for the most part, will be live.

The performance will consist of three parts: "Elements of Life," containing "Things We Feel" and "Things We See," interpretations of Japanese haiku poetry, and a short dance entitled "Friendship."

There is no admission fee and the public is invited to attend.

Grain Market

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures prices were strong in early dealings on the Chicago Board of Trade today, while soybeans were mixed with distant options sharply higher.

On the opening, soybeans were 3½ cents a bushel lower to 28 higher, January 7.45; Chicago wheat was 1 to 3 higher, December 4.82; Gulf hard red wheat was not traded; corn was 1 to 5 higher, December 3.50 and oats were 1½ to 2¼ higher, December 1.69.

Chrysler announces additional layoffs

DETROIT (AP) — The Chrysler Corp. has announced thousands of additional layoffs, raising to 64,200 the number of its employes scheduled to be off their jobs in December.

Chrysler said Tuesday it was laying off 35,500 workers temporarily and 8,400 indefinitely, closing all but one of its six U.S. car plants and making "extreme cutbacks" at 42 manufacturing plants from the day before Thanksgiving until Jan. 6. The firm said the action is aimed at cutting its inventory of unsold cars.

The firm is the nation's seventh largest with a total blue-collar work force of 105,000. With 22,000 workers currently on indefinite layoff, the total effect of the layoffs will be to put 64,200 out of work in December, or about 61 per cent of the Chrysler work foce.

Some 95,000 auto workers are on layoffs this week, including 37,000 indefinitely at General Motors, 10,425 at Ford, and 16,000 at Chrysler.

The total Big Three work force is 650,000, down from 750,000 just 13 months ago, and there are persistent reports that further layoffs are imminent. "It looks like the roof is about to cave in," said one union official.

Facing the prospect of at least 110,000 Big Three employes out of work in the pre-Christmas period, union officers reacted quickly and angrily to the Chrysler announcement.

United Auto Workers Vice President Doug Fraser accused Chrysler of "sloppy management" or "manipulation" and said the layoffs were the most serious ever at Chrysler "in terms of one fell swoop."

He called for the resignations of Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend and President John Riccardo, blaming them for Chrysler's buildup of 380,000 unsold new cars — enough to supply dealers for four months.

"When they make mistakes, they don't pay for them, the workers pay for them," Fraser said, pointing out that the firm produced 62,000 more cars than it sold in September and October.

Three Detroit assembly plants will be down along with two others, leaving just the St. Louis, Mo., facility in operation.

Although the firm will not close its 42 supply plants, production cutbacks there were described as "extreme" with many layoffs.

Chrysler said production will resume at a slower pace at the six U.S. car plants in January. Chrysler sales during October were off almost 17 per cent, and early November deliveries plunged 34 per cent to a 13-year low.

Industrywide, new model sales in October were down 27 per cent from the year before and early November sales fell 38 per cent.

Tenn., investigator, said the shells were plastic coated. "This is the type of shell that would splatter upon impact and make it very hard to run any ballistics tests on."

Missouri authorites have been unable to determine the caliber of the bullet taken from the deceased head because of its condition.

Dunklin County Sheriff Raymond Scott said he did not know if ballistics tests would be requested from Tennessee authorities by his office. Scott said the bullet recovered "was torn up so badly it won't classify. That's my impression, but I'll check."

Goodman was arrested in an automobile registered in Tennessee to a relative, Calvin Nunnery of Williston, Tenn. Nunnery reportedly now lives in Parma, also.

A neighbor of the Garrison home in Kennett, Victor H. Landrum, told of seeing a two-door model, light-colored car around 9:10 a.m. on the morning of the crime. Landrum first told of seeing a man walking around the car, but told of seeing two persons beside the car when he looked out to check on a noise he heard, which he described as a "backfire".

Landrum said the car was parked on the bypass, south of his house, and was headed west. "One man was slender, had red sandy hair and wore glasses. The other man was shorter and had black hair," Landrum recalled.

"Yes ... I think I can identify the one with the glasses," Landrum answered when asked if he could identify any of them if he saw them again.

Goodman is being held under $50,000 bond in the Fayette County jail. His trial will be conducted Nov. 25.

Dr. Garrison, who received a divorce from Mrs. Garrison earlier this year, is now the subject of a snarled extradition controversy between the governors of Mississippi and Missouri.

Gov. Bill Waller has agreed to sanction Garrison's extradition only if his Missouri counterpart, Gov. Christopher Bond, will guarantee that the physician will be allowed to post bail.

Bond has refused to make such an agreement, saying he has no legal right to enter such an agreement.

Dunklin County authorities have sent letters agreeing in part to some of Waller's requests.

Waller made reference in his extradition announcement to "conflicting evidence", which he said was one of his reasons for seeking the guarantee from Bond. The other, he pointed out, was that the doctor should be allowed to treat his patients until the matter is settled in court.

Dr. Garrison, bolstered by more than a dozen witnesses, has claimed he spent the night of Sept. 7 at Pickwick Lake near Corinth on the houseboat of Ronald Windsor, prosecuting attorney of Alcorn County.

Further ruling asked on majority rights law

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—The state Supreme Court has been asked to explain how its overturning of the new majority rights law affects the time the law was in effect before the law was declared void.

The law, changing the majority age from 21 to 18, was declared unconstitutional Nov. 12 because it did not amend the law section by section but merely instructed the reviser of statutes to cross out the number "21" or word, "twenty-one," and insert "18."

Robert M. Sommers, who intervened in the case—involving whether 18-year-olds can serve on juries—for the attorney general's office, filed a motion Tuesday for clarification.

Sommers said numerous phone calls to his office indicate "many citizens...took action in reliance on the validity" of the law between Aug. 13 and Nov. 12 and "Numerous disputes over the legal effectiveness of these actions will undoubtedly end up in the courts..."

The court did not indicate whether it would consider Sommers' motion.

The majority rights law did not affect laws on sale and possession of alcoholic everages, where 21 is the requirement, and does not affect the right of 18-year-olds to vote.

But it allowed 18-year-old males to marry without parental consent, and allowed 18-year-olds to sign contracts, obtain loans, serve on juries and qualify for various licenses.

Jackson residents to vote on 1-cent sales tax

JACKSON - Jackson residents will decide Tuesday whether they want the city to meet the added responsibilities of growth and keep pace with inflation in providing the facilities and services expected by the citizens, according to the city officials.

Revenue from the one-cent city sales tax would be used for free weekly residential refuse collection from two 20-gallon containers, new swimming pool, parking areas, walking paths, nature trail, tree planting, band concert shell, softball diamond, tennis courts, fishing pound, playground equipment, basketball court, picnic tables and shelters, and horseshoe pitching courts, fire station and police station, and street improvements.

Current city revenue cannot keep pace with economic growth and the demands of Jackson citizens for more and better services. With the growth of Jackson comes added responsibilities, and inflation has added to the burden of the City Administration in meeting city's needs.

The tax would be one cent for each $1 spent on purchases at retail, or taxable services.

The program at that time was voluntary, but when few people elected to take the insurance, Congress made it mandatory.

Now communities in flood prone areas must adopt the program or be cut off from all federal loans and money in areas subject to flooding.

Government regulations require that any new structures in the flood areas be tied down, which pertain mainly to mobile homes; be built using flood resistant materials; adequate drainage and flood proofing of utilities.

The regulation that created the most concern among those at the meeting was the one requiring that the first floor of all new houses be built above the flood level.

City Manager Charles Church said the city must decide if the advantages of having the flood insurance, which includes primarily the continued availability of loans, outweight the disadvantages, which include loss of the loans and increased costs for construction site preparation and surveying.

Loans and funds the city would lose include municipal loans and grants, federal mortgage loan insurance, disaster assistance loans, Small Business Administration loans, Farmers Home Administration and Veterans Administration loans. The loss of loans would only be for housing in areas declared flood prone.

One man in the audience called the program "friendly persuasion by a Democratic government."

Commissioner Ted Elliot said the program was one more case of the federal government "ramming something down our throats."

The HUD representatives disagreed. "We should have learned our lesson over the past 200 years," McClure said. He added that over the past 30 years the government has spent $9 billion trying to engineer floods away and instead they have become worse.

He said in a 30-year period a house in the flood prone areas has a 26 per cent chance of being flooded.

He said that to qualify under the federal program the city must adopt the flood elevations, require all new housing be built above these elevators and that non-residential construction be flood proofed to the elevations and make sure nothing is done in the area floodway to raise the level of the water.

The commission asked Church and Assistant City Mbill Whitlock to review a model ordinance and report to the commission on its adaptability to Sikeston.

The model ordinance contains a provision allowing local boards of adjustment to grant exceptions to the elevations. However, McClure pointed out certain exceptions could raise the insurance rates considerably.

Insurance rates for a house built one foot above flood level would be one cent per $100 valuation, while for a house built one foot below the rate, it would be $1.59 per $100. Insurance is also available for contents of the house.

In other action, Church told the commission that $6 million in funds are available in Missouri as part of the federally sponsored Community Development Revenue Sharing Act which will replace urban renewal.

Church said the program is 100 per cent federally funded. The money is to be used for aiding low and moderate income areas. He said the city is looking into the program to see if it is eligible for the funds.

Committee to be asked to require open records

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A special legislative committee will be asked to require all records filed with the state in compliance with the Unfair Milk Sales Practices Act to be open when it considers revisions of the law today.

Sen. Paul Bradshaw, R-Springfield, who has been an active member in the House-Senate committee's inquiry into the problems with the 1959 law, said that in light of Agriculture Director James Boillot's apparent refusal to make the records public, such a provision should be included in the law itself.

The 10-member committee which is expected by Dec. 2 to develop proposed revisions for submission to the legislature next January, also accepted recommendations on revising the law from the Agriculture Department, the attorney general's office and members of the state's dairy industry.

Low raw milk prices for farmers and skyrocketing prices at the retail level earlier this year prompted scrutiny of the law and its enforcement.

Concerning the open r4cords proposal, regulations issued by the department for implementation of the statute require that price filings of dairies and distributors be kept secret, apparently because of their competitive nature.

Those regulations, which could be changed in 10 days after revised rules are filed with the secretary of state.

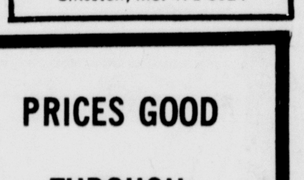
Dennis said this is similar to the recent rash of burglaries in the county. "Parasites are running through the country taking advantage of people," he said.



NO PLACE LIKE HOME

Not without reason is an establishment designed for funeral service called a "Funeral Home." And if it meets the requirements of privacy and dignity which characterize the well-appointed residence, it will have met the primary needs of a bewildered family desperately seeking the security which the word "home" connotes. At our "home" all our efforts are devoted to this end.

Rogers to miss final

CAPE GIRARDEAU — The collegiate careers of nine Southeast Missouri State University football players will come to an end Saturday afternoon when the Indians close out the 1974 campaign at Kirksville against Northeast Missouri State University.

All of the nine seniors have started at one time or another during their careers, and most have been consistent first stringers this season.

The departing players appeared in their last game before home fans over the weekend when the Tribe downed the Lincoln University Tigers, 19-6.

Only eight of the nine will suit up for Saturday's game against the Bulldogs. The absentee will be Steve Rogers, a 6-1, 180-pound defensive back from Chaffee who broke a wrist two weeks ago when the Indians defeated Central Missouri State University.

An honorable mention All-MIAA player in 1973, Rogers was considered by the Indian coaching staff to be one of the best defensive backs in the conference. Despite missing last week's game, he still leads Southeast Missouri State's defensive corps in interception with four.

Three other members of the defensive unit will also be on the "missing list" after Saturday. They are Dennis Helms, a 6-0, 195-pounder, Mike Maguire, a 5-10, 185-pounder, and Robert Johnson, a 6-2, 228-pounder.

Johnson is a lineman from Hillsboro, Ill., who played both offensively and defensively in his various years at Southeast Missouri State.

Both Helms and Maguire are linebackers, and both prepped at Roosevelt High School in St. Louis. Maguire played his first two years of collegiate football at Northeast Oklahoma. Helms played all four years at Southeast Missouri State.

In his first year he was a fullback, but he operated from the linebacking spot during his final three years. Last season he was an honorable mention All-MIAA choice.

Offensively, the Tribe will lose five lettermen through graduation, all of them consistent starters this season.

They are David Goncher, a 6-0, 177-pound flanker from South Chicago Heights, Ill.; Carl Gross, a 6-4, 235-pound tight end from Cape Girardeau, Ron Reed, a 5-10, 210-pound guard from Rogers, Ark.; Ed Slaughter, a 6-1, 165-pound split end from Cape Girardeau; and Robert Stolzer, a 6-1, 215-pound tackle from Festus.

Gross was an honorable mention Little All-America pick last year, Reed made the All-MIAA second team, and Goncher qualified for honorable mention in the All-MIAA voting.

Slaughter was a first team All-MIAA choice, and he has established several records during his four-year stay at Southeast Missouri State.

Last season he set the single season record for pass receiving yardage -- 753 yards. And Saturday in the waning moments against Lincoln he caught the 101st pass of his collegiate career to forge a new mark for number of pass receptions in a career.

The win over Lincoln assured Southeast Missouri State's first-year head coach, Jim Lohr, of a winning season. The Tribe carries a 6-4 record into the finale against Northeast Missouri State's Bulldogs.

The Bulldogs lost to Southwest Missouri State University last weekend and have a 4-6 overall record.

Risco checks Indians

WARDELL — Risco and host-North Pemiscot took expected wins in the North Pemiscot Tourney last night. Risco downed New Madrid 61-45 and North Pemiscot bombed Gideon 83-63.

Risco, seeded fourth in the tourney, got of to a fast start. Holding the Indians to eight points, the Tigers chalked up 15 to take the lead in the first quarter New Madrid fared no better in the second quarter, as they gained only 10 points off the Risco defense. Keeping a tight rein on the Indians wasn't all the Tigers succeeded in doing. Using the first quarter to warm up, they began to find the target more often and hit for 21 markers to put New Madrid on a 36-18 trail.

But the tables turned after the half. Risco had a lid on their basket and just couldn't add up more than seven points. Taking full advantage of their position, New Madrid moved within six of the lead. The Indians' hopes of an upset vanished as they once again fell victim to Risco's top playing. Fourth quarter action gave way to the Tigers giving them a quarter-final berth.

Dennis Patterson, Steve Landers and Charles Johnson paced the Risco team to the win dumping in 17, 14 and 13 points respectively. Steve Glenn led New Madrid's scoring with 16.

Coach McMahon's squad played heads-up ball to meet second-seeding standards. Their gain in the first period helped to make the difference. The Mustangs moved out from Gideon by a score of 19-9. The Bulldogs began finding their target during the second quarter, but North Pemiscot slipped a few more shots by them to hold the lead at the half-time break, 42-28.

The Gideon team came back from the locker room ready to score, which they did, but to no avail. North Pemiscot continued their steady ball handling holding back the Bulldogs just enough to give them a clear way. In the third period, North Pemiscot scored 23 points to that of Gideon's 19. The Bulldogs did not have enough to pull the win in and North Pemiscot took the first step up toward win in their own tourney.

Six North Pemiscot players scored in double figures to produce a winning team effort. Jerry Stewart and Joe Jennings both hit for 17. Dan Robinson pumped in 11, while Johnny Dunbar and Ray Norris teamed for 10 each. Gary Pyland led Gideon's scoring with 21 markers with help from Virgil Sparks, who netted 20.

Tourney action will resume Thursday night at 6:30. In the first game Risco will have a shot at number one seeded Lilbourn and in the following game, North Pemiscot faces competition from Delta C-7.

Bobcats run up unbeaten mark

DELTA--- The Delta Bobcats advanced their record to 3- 0 last night when they handed Oran an 80- 67 decision.

The first half saw good steady ball playing. Delta was able to squeeze past the Eagles by four points, picking up the early edge. Oran remained consistent in their scoring, hitting for 12 markers in the second period as they did in the first. Yet the Bobcats picked up a few more points on the Eagles and at the half led 35- 24.

Delta came back on Oran during the third quarter to open the scoring. It was a wild ending as both teams found easy shooting. Oran came close to pulling off a comeback, but Delta tightened up to capture their third win of the season.

Delta's Nate Crowden had a hot game pumping in 28 points. Back- up men were Mike Kelly and Mitch Stroder with 16 and 14 respectively. Robert Taylor was high scorer for the Eagles with 24 markers. Keith Campbell followed with 16.

Dunklin came away with a perfect night as the Bobcats' also won the J.V. contest by a score of 47- 40. Dunkin led the way for the home team with 16 points. Burlison threw in 13 for the Eagles.

WFL players back league

By CRAIG AMMERMAN
AP Sports Writer

Some World Football League players called reporters together in Memphis, Tenn., to voice confidence in the future of their league and their team.

The only difficulty was that the players were all members of the Memphis Southmen, probably the most solid franchise in the shaky league and one certain to improve when it picks up the likes of Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield next year.

John Huarte, quarterback of the Southmen, whose 17-3 record is the league's best, said on Tuesday the money problems hitting the WFL were not affecting the Southmen, whose principal owner is Toronto millionaire John Bassett.

"We've come in with a first-class operation and put a first-class team out there," said co-captain Don Highsmith.

Huarte said "there will be a strong future for the WFL." He said he was confident owners would solve the league's problems in the coming months and put the weaker franchises in stronger hands.

An example of the league's problems is that Memphis has lost about $700,000 this year, $200,000 more than it expected to lose. An Associated Press survey shows that overall the league has lost about $20 million and several franchises.

Those mounting money problems will be the subject this Friday and Saturday when WFL owners and prospective investors meet in Memphis to seek new dollars and new direction.

Meanwhile, league playoffs will be under way. The Hawaiians visit Southern California and Philadelphia plays at Florida in first-round games Thursday night. The winners play Memphis and Birmingham in the semifinals, with the championship game — called the World Bowl — scheduled Dec. 5.

But more important to this league than finishing its first year is how it will begin its second. Before it can, numerous problems must be solved.

The Birmingham franchise, which lost its offices because it didn't pay the bills and had its assets attached in court for back taxes, is seekng $1.5 million in local financing. Players haven't been paid in several weeks, and tax liens of about $500,000 have been filed against the club and its owner.

Archer sparks South to win

SOUTH PEMISCOT--- Jerry Archer came off the South Pemiscot bench to spark the Bulldogs to a 73- 65 win over Pemiscot County Tuesday night.

It was a battle from the beginning as Pemiscot County fought to get into the winning column. They were able to claim title to the lead in first quarter action by a single point, 21- 20. The Bulldogs tightened their defense while getting their offense moving and pulled together to take the edge at half, 43- 40.

Pemiscot County slowed down the Bulldog's shooting somewhat, but could not take advantage as their hitting was not as steady as before, dropping in only eight. Play was back to par in the final quarter, but it was too late for Pemiscot County.

The Bulldogs. Chuck Bates had 16 points to his credit and Jerry Archer 15. Alan Becker and Mike Clark both shot for 14 while Joe Martin dropped in 12. David Madden had an outstanding night for Pemiscot County, hitting for 29 big markers. McGoughy backed him up with 12.

The Bulldogs record now stands at 2- 0.

Mizzou bids for respectability

COLUMBIA, MO., — Shooting for 7-4 respectability, and a second-place finish in the Big Eight, Ol' Mizzou closes out the 1974 ledger against border-rival Kansas here Saturday afternoon.

None of the bowl's bird dogs will be among the 55,000 expected to view this 83rd football scrap in the oldest college rivalry west of the Mississippi. But -- for both teams -- its won't be simply a case of playing out the schedule.

In what has to be a frustrating season for Kansas -- five straight losses -- the Jayhawkers, 4-6, can soothe their critics by beating the Tigers a fourth, straight time.

Most Mizzou fans, on the other hand, would consider a 7-4 record, capped by a win over K.U., as quite acceptable.

Nobody has to alert Tiger coach Al Onofrio about the perils of playing K.U.

"They are a dangerous offensive team, always capable of pulling off the big play," Onofrio says. "Defensively, they hit hard and pursue awfully well."

Ol' Mizzou goes into this windup game with a fullback problem that has persisted since Ray Bybee was lost in the Colorado game with a fractured ankle.

Since then, the Black and Gold attack has featured Bill Ziegler, Rick Cook and sophomore Jornel Williams in that spot -- but their accomplishments were spotty.This week, Onofrio may tap sophomore Annise Davis for the starting fullback job -- though the rookie from Malden, Mo. has been idle for about six weeks with a sprained foot.

Ziegler, who fractured a big toe against Oklahoma, is back on the practice field this week, but Onofrio is unsure of his availability.

"We're just joing to try to get the work to Ziegler this week, and hope he'll be able toplay," Onofrio says.

Bybee's incapacity has made tailback Tony Galbreath the focal point of opposing teams' defensive blueprints -- and the Jayhawks no less figure to key on the bruising 225-pound junior from Fulton, Mo. The other facet of Missouri's attack is quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz's throwing arm, coupled with split end Mark Miller's penchant for grabbing Zark's tosses.

Miller leads conference recievers with 323 catches for 452 yards and five touchdowns.

Coach Don Fambrough's Big Blue squad has more offensive firepower than Mizzou. The Jayhawks, who switched to a Wishbone-style attack against Oklahoma, exploit the running of quarterback Scott McMichael, tailback Laverne Smith and fullback Robert Miller.

McMichael is the first sophomore in K.U history to pass for more than 1000 yards. He has prime receivers in Emmett Edwards and Bruce Adams. Edwards' end-zone catch with 1:37 left beat Missouri, 14-13, at Lawrence last year.

For Missouri, this is the farewell game for 17 seniors -- 14 of whom will be suiting up Saturday. On the sidelines will be Bybee, safety Tony Gillick, who had knee surgery Sunday, and Tigerback Joe Gross with a dislocated shoulder.

Mizzou leads the all-time rivalry, 38 to 35, with 9 games tied.

The second nicest thing about masonry is that it costs less.

The nicest, of course, is beauty. The result of skilled masons creating walls with craftmanship, texture and durability that can't be imitated by machines.

You might think it would cost more than its metal, glass or precast concrete competitors.

But in most cases, it costs less — initially and over the life of the building.

And finance charges and real estate taxes are less.

If that isn't enough, masonry walls are far less expensive to maintain — because masonry doesn't warp, dent, buckle or rot. And it never needs painting. Also, walls of masonry reduce heating and cooling expenses.

The Hunt

The Missouri quail season is open until Jan. 15 of 1975, with a daily bag of eight and possession of 16. Quail hatch reports were mixed over the state, but early hatches generally were down because of bad spring weather. In many areas, late hatches will make up for the early losses.

Bass tournament not a threat

COLUMBIA — If Lou Brock's success rate on base stealing was as low as the success rate of another type of professional, he wouldn't have been in the running for Most Valuable Player.

A year-long study of Missouri bass fishing tournaments by Arvil Ming, fisheries biologist for the Department of Conservation, shows that the professional fishermen really don't catch all that many fish.

Overall, Ming's study indicates that fishing tournaments in general are not a serious problem to bass fishing on Missouri reservoirs. The tournaments have taken a lot of heat over the years from non-club fishermen who say the bass clubs catch "all the fish."

Not so Ming's figures indicate the average professional tournament fisherman fishes a nine-hour day and takes three bass for a catch rate of only one bass every three hours

"At these rates, it would take 17 tournaments on the same lake to equal a catch rate of one bass per acre," says Mings. "We consider a take of 10 bass per acre to be good fishing."

Ming studied 16 major tournaments in Missour, not including the small club tournaments which are both popular and prevalent.

"The combined catch was 4,270 bass from five reservoirs over a four-month period," he says. "it's equal to one fourth of the annual bass harvest from only one 1,700 acre arm of Table Rock Lake.

"Even if all 16 major tournaments had occurred on the same lake, they wouldn't have had much impact on the bass population. And more than 60 per cent ofthe catch was released alive."

Ming found generally that the more national in scope the tournament the more care was taken with the fish caught.

He found most of the problems occur in the so-called "open" tournaments where fishermen who are not bass club members pay an entry fee and fish for prizes. In "open" or "buddy" tournaments, there is little incentive to the fishermen to keep their catch alive.

"When a bass club sponsors an open tournament," Ming says, they usually do a better job of returning bass to the water and require and enforce stricter rules.

Club tournaments are limited to members of a given club, and average 18 members per tournament. There are 69 bass clubs in Misssouri with 1,630 members. Some of these bass clubs judge fish on length, rather than weight during their tournaments and fish are returned immediately to the water.

"Public criticism has increased along with the number of bass tournaments,' Ming says. "Some think they threaten the resources because of the equipment used, the ability of bass fishermen to catch fish and ther relatively high number of bass visible at weigh-in

"Some criticism stopped when major tournament sponsors adopted the rule for returning caught bass with bonus points given as an incentive forthe tournament fishermen to bring their fish inalive to the weigh-in. The object of our study was to see if the resource is being damaged by the tournament fishermen."

A year ago, the Conservation Commission did two things -- it adopted a position statement on bass tournaments, and it turned Ming loose on the study of the tournaments. The study is almost complete and so far indicates that the tournaments are not harmful to the bass resources.

Cautious optimism on rabbits

You have to use intuition, yers of experience, bales of data and have a memory like the proverbial elephant to be a rabbit biologist.

And, having made the prediction, you have to have the patience of a mother of twins because it will be two months before you know if you're right or not.

But it looks like a good rabbit production year, according to Ken Sadler, biologist with the Department of Conservation. The rabbit season opened Oct. 1 and runs through Feb. 15, 1975, with a daily limit of six and possession limit of 12.

Some years, the prediction of rabbit umbers is relatively easy -- observers statewide see a lot of rabbits and, rabbits being what they are, there should be many more by hunting season.

But in the July census of rabbits in 1974, observers recorded slight improvement in six of the eight regions of the state, ranging from only one per cent over 1973 to 11 per cent -- not a significant statistical change. The Bootheel and the northwest prairie declined.

Therefore rabbit populations should be no better than they were in 1973. Right? Wrong. Or possibly wrong.

"I'm cautiously optimistic that the harvest is going to be better than the survey would indicate," Sadler says. "During the census period, I think it was more often hot and dry than cool and wet and under hot, dry conditions, rabbits just don't appear along the roads when the census is made.

"The only year I can remember when conditions were similar was in 1954, a year of extreme drouth. We had an indicated decline in the rabbit population from the road census, but the harvest showed the the population actually had begun to climb.

"We like to think there is a nice straight-line relationship between rabbits seen and the actual population, but the very hot, very dry conditions can disrupt this relationship."

The census covered 111 counties along 6573 miles of census route. Highest indicated popualtions were in north-eastern region.

"The name of the game has become habitat," Sadler says. "The days when a hunter could find rabbits just about anywhere are gone.

"There still is good hunting, but rabbit hunters have to learn what good rabbit habitat is an d how to find it -- and how to recognize rabbit sign so they know where the animals are there."

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Colorful migration in state

JEFFERSON CITY — Picture a flock of canvasback ducks, hanging over the decoys in the icy November chill, their feet splayed toward the water as the hunters breathlessly crouch in the blind. Picture the rich pink glow of their plumage...

Pink!

David Trauger, wildlife biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and other research biologists in the north central states are dyeing male canvasbacks different colors this autumn to determine migration habits and wintering distribution.

Canvasbacks and redheads have had low populations for several years and hunting regulations are very restrictive on both species.

In Missuri, during the October 30- December 18 duck hunting season, the limit is one bird of either species -- they are worth 100 points on the waterfowl point system which gives different species a point value and gives each huner 100 points to work toward.

Canvasback and redhead hunting is closed on the Mississippi River from Alton Dam north to the Iowa line.

The Fish and Wildlife Service biologists have dyed birds blue, yellow and pink. "Any observation of color-marked canvasbacks," says Trauger, "should be reported to the Northern Prairie Wildlife Research Center, P. O. Box 1747, Jamestown, North Dakota 58401."

Trauger wants the name and address of the observer, the date, time, location of the sighting and color of the bird. In addition, information on the activity of the bird, size of the flock and other species in the flock would help.

"Success of the study depends on observation of the colored birds away from the marking locations," Trauger says. "We'd greatly appreciate any help from the public."

A narrow tight rope

COLUMBIA — Deer biologists walk a narrow tightrope with the added handicap that they can't see where they're going ... only where they've been.

Northeast Missouri is having a bucks-only deer season November 16-24 and there are complaints that the deer herd is large enough to permit the harvest of does.

"It's always a tough job to set regulations which give hunters the maximum benefit, but still don't damage the deer herd," says Wayne Porath, deer biologist for the Department of Conservation.

"Last year, hunter numbers increased 31 per cent in Unit Three, which is the northeast river hills, and 26 percent in Unit Two, the north central part fo the state.

"These increases were far above the statewide average increase of 12 per cewnt. The increased hunting pressure resulted in an increase deer harvest of 45 per cent in Unit Two and 46 per cent in Unit Three.

"More importantly, the harvest of does increased 66 per cent in Unit Two and 51 per cent in Unit Three over the previous any-deer season.

"While deer are more productive in the fertile northern Missuri areas, they are more valuable to hunting because of limited habitat. Regulations must take these factors into account in preventing over harvest.

"Once over-harvest occurs, it takes several years for a deer herd to rebuild and we think the possibility for over-harvest in this part of north Missuri definitely exists."

The problem with Missouri deer management is that the managers have been able to look at the herd after the fact, not before. The best indicator of deer herd health is the hunting season, but it would be far better to know before rather than after.

Missouri has gone to a quota system on antlerless deer in the new Unit Six-A, the river hills of central Missouri, in an effort to manage before the season rather than after. While quotas complicate the regulations, they do give a more accurate harvest system.

The 1974 season will be bucks only from November 16-22 in Units One, Four, Five, Seven, Eight and Nine and any deer November 23-24 The entire season will be bucks only in Units Two, Three, Six-A (the area south of the river hills of central Missouri) and Unit Ten.

There is a quota of 1,200 antlerless deer in unit Six-A.

Hunter safety urged

JEFFERSON CITY — It's as rare and precious as diamonds. It's as desirable as Raquel Welch. It's as uncomplicated as a good parent. It saves more lives than the guard at the beach with the bulging muscles.

It's common sense.

"All the safety rules and regulations in the world won't replace common sense," says Bud Eyman, hunter safety coordinator forthe Department of Conservation.

"This is the time of the year when hunters need to be most conscious of safety -- and to use their common sense -- because this is when the most hunters will be in the field."

Almost all of Missouri's hunting seasons are open, including the gun deer season which will draw a quarter of a million hunters into the field November 16-24. Upland and waterfowl seasons are open and woods hunters will be going after squirrels.

Eyman strongly recommeded the use of "hunter" or fluorescent orange clothing for deer and upland game huntes. "Make your self as visible to other hunters as possible," he says. He also urged hunters to learn and use the Ten Comandments of Gun Safety:

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun.
2. Watch that muzzle. Carry your gun safely; keep safety on until ready to shoot.
3. Unload guns when not in use. Take down or have actions open; guns should be cased when transporting to shooting area.
4. Be sure barrel is clear of obstructions. and that you have proper size ammunition.
5. Be sure of target before you pull trigger. Know identifying features of game you hunt.
6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot. Avoid all horseplay.
7. Never climb a tree or fence or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.
8. Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or water; at target practice be sure your backstop is adequate.
9. Store guns and ammunition separately, beyond the reach of children.
10. Avoid alcoholic beverages before or during shooting.

Cats win pair

LESTERVILLE--- Lesterville ran their record to 3- 1 in last night's basketball action, taking a 73- 56 win over Bunker.

Seth Barton led the attack on the Bunker squad with 26 points. Jim Denbow chipped in 18 and Steve Denbow 14 to aid in the winning effort. Martin hit for 15 to earn high scoring honors for Bunker.

It was a winning night for the Bearcats. The J.V. team won a 46- 34 decision over Bunker. Bill White had a hot hand for the home team, pouring in 21 markers. Hay led scoring for Bunker with 12.

Scoring:

LESTERVILLE (73)

Barton 26, Jim Denbow 18, Steve Denbow 14, Fitzgerald 4, Wicliffe 4, Zhan 7. Totals: FG— 28; FT— 17; PF— 25.

Sooners . . all the way

NEW YORK (AP) — "The lump in my throat is a little bigger this week," says Coach Barry Switzer of Oklahoma.

"We're not loose at all," says Michigan's Bo Schembechler. "This is a big game."

"I don't feel any pressure," says your friendly neighborhood college football forecaster. Let them feel the pressure on the playing fields of Lincoln, Neb., where top-rated Oklahoma meets sixth-ranked Nebraska, and Columbus, Ohio, where No. 3 Michigan faces fourth-ranked Ohio State.

"Our defensive coaches think Nebraska's a better offensive team than they were last year," Switzer reports. "It's going to be the most physical football game we've played. It's the biggest game we've played since we played 'em last year."

That one ended 27-0 in favor of Oklahoma. This one? Try 26-14 ... Oklahoma.

Last week's score was 46 right, 20 wrong and one tie for .697, so maybe we are feeling the pressure, after all. For the season, it's 419-182-16—.718.

Meanwhile, Michigan and Ohio State have their annual Big Ten shootout ... with one difference.

"The difference is that last year both teams were unbeaten and untied," Schembechler points out. "This time, if the game ends in a tie, we go to the Rose Bowl since we've already clinched a tie for the Big Ten championship."

If Ohio State wins, the race will end in a tie and the conference athletic directors will vote on the Rose Bowl representative. You remember the fuss when they voted Ohio State in following last year's 10-10 standoff? Wouldn't it be funny if it happened again?

So be it ... Ohio State 24-17.

Also at stake is the Pacific-8 Conference spot in the Rose Bowl. It will or won't be decided when Southern California meets UCLA. A littie confusion music, maestro.

If UCLA wins, they will be co-champions and UCLA will go to the Rose Bowl by virtue of a head-to-head victory over USC. If UCLA beats USC and California beats Stanford, there will be a three-way tie but UCLA would go (1) because it beat the other two and (2) because Cal is on probation and can't go no matter what happens.

Hold on, there's more. If UCLA beats Southern Cal and Stanford beats Cal, there would also be a three-way tie, but since USC beat Stanford and UCLA and Stanford tied, the team with the best over-all record would go. That would eliminate 4-4-2 Stanford. But UCLA would be 7-2-2 and USC 7-2-1, with one game left.

USC would then have to beat Notre Dame to get the bowl berth. A tie with Notre Dame would send UCLA on the basis of a face-to-face triumph over USC. Ain't no way Stanford's gonna go.

Of course, USC could make the whole thing meaningless by beating or tying UCLA. And that's what's gonna happen ... Southern Cal 28-14.

And, for good measure ... California 27, Stanford 23.

Upset Special of the Week ... Southern Methodist 21, Baylor 17. Bears' bubble bursts. By the way, if Baylor wins, Texas would be eliminated from the Southwest Conference chase.

Elsewhere ...

Notre Dame 35, Air Force 0: Even if ND's looking ahead to Southern Cal, it won't help the 2-8 Falcons, suffering through their worst season ever.

Maryland 38, Virginia 10: Virginia Coach Sonny Randle says Maryland probably is the finest team to ever play in the Atlantic Coast Conference. He's about to find out first-hand.

Michigan State 21, Iowa 7: Young Spartans conclude a 7-3-1 season and start looking ahead to next year.

Houston 31, Florida State 14: Seminoles on another losing streak.

Yale 24, Harvard 14: This makes it a perfect 9-0 for the Yalies.

Kentucky 20, Tennessee 16: Give me liberty ... or the Liberty Bowl.

Louisiana State 21, Tulane 7: Ten weeks ago, they thought this might mean a bowl bid.

Clemson 35, South Carolina 28: Nothing could be finer than for South Carolina to win Paul Dietzel's coaching finale.

North Carolina 40, Duke 30: Get some new batteries for the scoreboard, Myrtle.

Wake Forest 21, Furman 14: Nation's last winless team gets a last-chance win.

Washington report

'Economy must be restored'

WASHINGTON, D.C. — There are few who would disagree with the statement that the most urgent need of the American public today is a comprehensive program to restore the health of our economy.

The complex economic situation in which we find ourselves demands a well-balanced program which reduces prices and at the same time increases productivity.

First, we need heavy cuts in government expenditures – at least double the $5 billion budget reduction recommended by President Ford. The budget of no department can be sacrosanct. Every department and branch of government can find waste.

The President could set a good example for the rest of the government by voluntarily taking a $25,000-a-year salary cut. That would lend credibility to his pleas for every American to adopta more austere life style.

Second, we should have effective controls on wages and prices, including a control on the exhorbitantly high profits that have appeared in a few industries to the disgust of a majority of the American people.

Third, we should implement tax reforms to close certain loopholes which in the main benefit only the very large corporations. Such reforms could be achieved without increasing the already heavy burden on low and middle income families.

Suggested revisions in the tax code include elimination of the deferral of most taxes on income earned by American companies abroad, the taxation of capital gains when transferred at death or by gift, a plased reduction of the oil depletion allowance as well as reduction of the accelerated rate at which assets can be depreciated for tax purposes.

It is estimated that as much as $8 billion in additional revenues could be added to the Federal Treasury if such steps were taken.

A fourth step could well be a program which included measures to increase productivity. To that end I suggest lower interest rates, incentives for private investment in many of the declining sectors of the economy and a reduction in the heavy tax advantages for foreign investment.

Finally, a public employment program is needed – one that reduces the grievous economic effects of rising unemployment.

For every one per cent increase in unemployment, the Treasury loses $12 to $15 billion in tax receipts. Fewer jobs also mean heavier government spending for unemployment compensation, food stamps, Medicaid and other assistance.

We put people to work not only to prevent a loss of revenues, but also to forestall a further decline in national productivity.

These proposals, if carefully written and enforced once they become law, would improve the economy. With sound policies, plus sincere cooperation from all segments of our society, we can get this country back on the track of economic growth.

Reform work to end

JEFFERSON CITY — After holding six public hearings throughout the state, a citizens advisory committee on reforming the Missouri General Assembly is now entering its final work on recommendations for restructuring the legislative body.

A smaller House of Representatives, fewer committees, a senate where the lieutenant governor does not preside, and the ability to call itself into session appear to be some of the recommendations for the general assembly which the citizens committee is considering.

William Harrison, an executive vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, is chairman of the 23-member committee which has been looking at various reform measures since November of last year.

Harrison says the reform will be presented in package style and not as a "shopping list" from which the legislators could pick and choose. He expects the legislature to seriously consider the committee's proposals.

There is some support in the general assembly for these kinds of reforms, Harrison said, "but whether there is enough, I don't know."

Throughout the six public sessions, Harrison said, reduction of the 163-member House, reduction of the number of legislative committees, salary increases for legislators, extra staffing and the institution of carry-over for bills usually were commented on.

Public support was indicated for all those proposals, Harrison said, although the pay increase and reduction of the house drew criticism, as well.

A final committee meeting is expected sometime in mid-December at which a list of final recommendations will be chosen, and then printed for presentation to the general assembly in January.

Most proponents of reducing the house cited the unwieldy and inefficient size as reasons for a smaller body. But opponents of the reduction say a smaller house would be farther removed from constituents and would not greatly contribute to its efficiency.

Vic Gray, director of legislative programs for the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation, told the committee his organization would oppose any plan to reduce the number of representatives because it would further dilute the power of rural Missourians.

David Leuthold, associate professor of political science at the University of Missouri-Columbia, urged the committee to maintain a large house because a large house is able to develop more experts, train more leaders in participatory democracy, and insure a more personal contact between constituents and their legislators.

Other proposals aired during public hearings, where a total of 47 persons testified on the reform proposals, ranged from "workable" to "unworkable", Harrison said.

The chairman indicated that the establishment of a non-partisan unicameral legislature, proposed several times during the hearings, would not be one of the committee's recommendations.

The substantial power of the house speaker and committee chairmen came in for criticism at several of the public hearings. Rep. John Sharp of Kansas City suggested the committee require committee chairmen to schedule a hearing on a bill within a set period of time once a bill's sponsor requests such a hearing. Curtailment of the speaker's discretion in assigning bills to committees also was suggested at the hearings.

Republicans especially requested committee membership be made proportional according to the number of legislators each party has in any legislature. Republicans also urged that the minority floor leader be given the authority to appoint minority members of those committees. The house speaker, a Democrat in a Democratically - controlled house, now does so.

A spokesman for Gov. Christopher S. Bond suggested more economic disclosure for lobbyists, prohibition of conflict of interest among legislators, and creation of an independent agency to enforce ethics regulations.

Bond and other speakers suggested house and senate journals, the official legislative records, include all amendments and all roll call votes.

EVERYONE'S entitled to unwind now and then and that includes President Ford. On the links of a Washington D.C. golf course, the President sizes up a putt and appears a mite too concerned to be unwinding.

Bennett hosts meeting

Dr. Robert Bennett of Sikeston was host for the dinner meeting of the Southeast Missuri Chiropractic Association held Nov. 17 at the Ramada Inn.

Also attending from Sikeston were Dr. Ed Scheu, secretary of the organization, and Dr. Lamar Bechtold.

Dr. Carl Bird of Caruthersville presided at the business meeting.

Plans were discussed for an educational seminar to be held in the spring. The group selected Dr. Sid Williams of Atlanta, Ga., founder of the Life Foundation and president of the recently established Life Chiropractic College in Atlanta, to be the principal speaker for the seminar. Dr. William Dillman of Dexter presented the program on "Patient Orientatin of Life Principles as applied by Chiropractic Adjustments".

The group will meet again in January when they will review a film prepared by the International Chirpractic Association on the research being conducted by the University of Colorado in Boulder, Colo. on the science of chiropractic and the role it plays in the restoration and maintenance of health.

6 qualify for President's Club

KANSAS CITY — Five Sikeston persons and one Parma man have qualified for membership in Kansas City Life Insurance Co.'s President's Club, and attended the club seminar held Oct. 15-20 at the Kona Surf Hotel, Keauhou Bay, Hawaii.

Qualifying for membership from Sikeston were W. Keith Duncan, 217 Kramer Drive, general agent for Kansas City Life Insurance Co.; John D. Gallagher, 319 N. New Madrid St.; William P. Hunter Jr., 226 Tanner St.; Roger Tolliver, 849 Cambridge Drive; and Shirley A. Manker, 223 Crowe Place. John M. Leigh of Parma also qualified for the special club.

To become a member , an agent must meet high production requirements during the 18-month qualifying period. His professional achievements in the life insurance business as well as his service to his ommunity also are factors. Qualifying for President's Club membership is considered an outstanding achievement throughout the company and the life insurance industry.

Approximately 15percent of the company's 2,000 licensed agents throughut the country qualified for the President's Club.

W. Keith Duncan became a Kansas City Life general agent in Sikeston, Mo., four years ago after five years as a Company agent. He has qualified for the President's Club six times. He qualified to attend the 1974 seminar on the basis of his agency's outstanding production during the qualification period.

Seven agents in Duncan's Mid-Delta Agency qualified to attend the 1974 Seminar.

John D. Gallagher joined Kansas City Life in 1971. He has qualified for every President's Club since then. He was recognized at the Hawaii meeting as a Top Hatter, one of the company's leading producers.

William P. Hunter Jr., joined KansasCity Life in 1970. He has qualified for every President's Club since then.

John M. Leigh joined Kansas City Life 22 years ago. He has been a consistent club qualifiert during that time, having qualified ten times.

Mrs. Shirley Manker joined the company in 1972 and has qualified for every President's Club since then.

Roger Tolliver joined the company in 1973. This is his first time to qualify for the President's Club.

Doctor attends symposium

WYATT-Dr. Alouise C. Fenton of Wyatt has just returned from a medical symposium held by the American Society of Bariatric Physicians at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, Nev. Dr. Fenton is a former member of the board of trustees of the ASBP.

The bariatric physicians completed an intensive four-day course in the various modalities in the care of obese patients. Among the distinguished lecturers concerned with the multi-faceted aspects of obesity and allied diseases was Dr. Linus Pauling, the recipient of two Nobel prizes.

Dr. Fenton noted that there are, according to the U.S. Department of Public Health, 60 million overweight Americans. This, she concluded, represents a health hazard of epidemic proportions, and, to date, the American Society of Bariatric Physicians is the only viable medical organization directly supporting research and postgraduate education in the fight against obesity the quiet killer.

RISCO - Thanksgiving Day is perhaps the most widely appreciated holiday we observe.

Youngsters enjoy Thanksgiving Day parades which never fail to put them in a festive mood of anticipation for Christmas. Mothers and grandmothers love Thanksgiving because it usually means that family and friends gather together for a holiday of feasting and fellowship during which time bonds of affection are strengthened through joint thanksgiving for the year's blessings.

Last, but not least, most men love Thanksgiving, too! The bountifully- spread tables of food, the traditional television football games, and the fact that Thanksgiving offers a rare day of relaxation, all combine to make Thanksgiving Day a day to look forward.

In preparing for this important day of feasting and thanksgiving, perhaps you'll agree that it's not a moment too soon to begin collecting those special recipes that will make this Thanksgiving dinner one you'll serve with extra pride.

Today's column features some of the traditional dishes, along with some new and different ones for those who may like a change of pace from the usual Thanksgiving menu.

MAKE AHEAD
FROZEN CRANBERRY
SALAD

(Bits of jellied cranberry sauce make this salad different.)

2 (3 oz.) packages cream cheese
1/4 cup salad dressing
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/8 tsp. salt
1 cup drained, crushed pineapple
1 cup diced walnuts or pecans
1 cup diced bananas
1 1/2 cup heavy cream
1 one-pound can jellied cranberry sauce, chilled and cut into bits.

Decorations, optional.

Beat cream cheese with salad dressing, lemon juice and salt until smooth. Stir in pineapple, walnuts and bananas. Whip cream and fold into mixture. Lightly fold in cranberry bits.

Turn into 9-by-5- by-3 inch loaf pan which has been lined on all sides with a double thickness of waxed paper. Freeze until needed.

To unmold, place pan in warm water for a count of 15. Turn out on chilled platter. Place in refrigerator for 30 minutes before serving. Slice to serve. Makes 12 servings.

Decorations: Prepare one package whipped topping mix according to directions. Reserve one-half cup of prepared mix. Spread remainder over sides and top of frozen salad. Use cake decorator with no. 30 tip to make edging from whipped topping along top edges of frozen loaf. Decorate top with turkeys cut from sliced jellied cranberry sauce with cookie cutters. Freeze to set decorations.

GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE

A perfect vegetable dish for buffet dinners.

3 tbsp. butter, melted
2 tbsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. grated onion
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 (12 oz.) packages frozen French- style green beans, cooked
1/2 lb. grated cheddar cheese
1/2 cup corn flake crumbs.

Combine two tbsp. of the butter with the flour and cook gently. Remove from heat. Stir in seasonings and cream. Fold in beans. Place in shallow two quart casserole.

Cover with cheese, then with crumbs mixed with other tablespoon of butter. Bake in 350- degree oven for 30 minutes. Serves eight.

FRENCH- STYLE TURNIPS

(The seasonings make this vegetable different and special.)

9 medium turnips
1/4 lb. bacon in one piece or slab
2/3 cup minced onion
1 tbsp. flour
3/4 cup canned beef bouillon, or 1 bouillon cube dissolved with 3/4 cup water
1/2 to 1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar
1/4 tsp. rubbed sage
1/4 tsp. pepper

Peel, quarter and cook turnips in one inch of boiling salted water for five minutes. Drain.

Cut bacon in one fourth inch cubes; this should make three fourths cup. Cook four minutes in skillet, stirring constantly. Add onion and cook five minutes (do not let brown). Blend in flour. Add bouillon, salt (exact amount depends on saltiness of bacon.), sugar, sage and pepper. Cook two minutes, stirring constantly.

Add turnips. Cover and simmer 15 to 20 minutes or until turnips are tender. Makes six to seven servings.

MUSHROOM
BREAD STUFFING

(A surprise stuffing which will delight your guests.)

1 cup chopped onion
1 (4 oz.) can sliced mushrooms, drained
1/2 cup melted butter
12 cups soft bread cubes
1/4 cup minced parsley
1 tsp. sage
1/4 tsp. pepper
1 (10 oz.) can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 tbsp. milk

Saute onion and mushrooms in one fourth cup butter. Toss together bread, parsley, sage, pepper, one fourth cup butter and sauted vegetables. Stir soup and add to mixture.

Place in greased two quart casserole and sprinkle with milk. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes or until brown. Makes six to eight servings.

POTATO FILLING

(This is a recipe made the traditional Pennsylvania Dutch way and traditionally served as a substitute for bread stuffing.)

10 cups seasoned, mashed potatoes
2 eggs
3 cups chopped onion
3 cups chopped celery
2/3 cups butter
6 cups soft bread cubes (1/2 inch)
1/2 cup minced parsley
2 tsp. sage
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
2 tbsp. butter
2 tbsp. milk
Paprika

Mix eggs with mashed potatoes and set aside. Saute onion and celery in two thirds cup butter. Add bread cubes, parsley, sage, salt and pepper. Toss until golden.

Combine with mashed potato mixture. Turn into a buttered three quart casserole. Dot with two tbsp. butter and sprinkle with milk and paprika. Bake at 375 degrees for 40 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 10 servings.

When I die and Charles gets married the next week after they bury, me, I don't want a one of you to say one ugly word to him, cause believe you me, it will be with my blessing. (Provided that is, that she's a nice, practical matronly sort of lady and not one of these "sweet young things" these old middle- aged Romeos think have flipped over their false teeth, bald heads and beer paunches -- men can be so dumb and ignorant, but I guess that's why they're so easy to catch in the first place so I'd best not complain!) Anyway, Charles is adorable in his own little awkward way, and he really and truly needs someone to lookout for him and if I die, well, even a week on his own could lead to such disasterous results and dire accidents he might not be around much longer than me if he didn't have a keeper near at hand. You think maybe I exaggerate? Well, if I hadn't been there who would have pulled him out of the manhole he fell into crossing a street in downtown St. Louis, and who would have dodged in and out among the traffic picking up the Christmas packages he threw all over the intersection as he dropped from sight? Or, if I weren't there who would keep him from going to work each day with an orange sport coat, purple shirt, wine pants and yellow socks on -- now don't laugh. I know you're bound to have seen him some mornings when I haven't caught him before he's gotten out the door and wandered at his array of rainbow checks and stripes. Plus, who would find the hammer in the drawer that he's opened and looking at but can't see? or the shirt in the closet his hand is resting on but can't seem to find? So you see, he needs someone, and I was never more convinced than this weekend when dining out with Charles at the new seafood restaurant in the Chase. I was reading through the menu when I noticed this heavy whirl of smoke right before me eyes. I thought surely not, but by now I know better, so I very calmly lowered by menu and quietly said to Charles, "Darling, you've laid the top half of your menu on the candle and you're fast going up in flames and believe me -- he was!!

MUSIC TO HURRY BY

TORONTO (AP) — Veteran band leader Benny Louis wants to see piped music installed in the Toronto subway system and the Toronto Transit Commission is interested. Louis, who has been asked by the TTC to submit a report, says the speakers could be arranged in such a way that travelers who didn't want to listen to the music or news reports could easily move out of earshot.

Tasty holiday pies need flaky crusts with pizazz

By VIOLETTA LANE

The holidays are getting closer, but all year round there is a wealth of food for pie. Just about every fruit or vegetable in the market stands at attention awaiting selection for pie making.

You can close your eyes and visualize about any combination for pie- eating pleasure; pies as light and fluffy as cotton candy or the heavy, rich varieties of your choice.

No matter how fine the bakery, it is hard to beat a good homemade pie. The secret is in the crust.....but what is the crust without a good filling? With a few simple rules for both, your date with a pie should be a real success.

The following cooking hints and recipes are taken from a cookbook by Johnson Publishing Co. of Chicago.

Remember, when making fruit pies, use a deep plate so that the juices will not escape.

When using flour, tapioca or corn starch to thicken juices, mix with sugar, spices and fruit in a bowl before placing in crust. In this way the flour, sugar, etc., are well distributed.

A small amount of butter and lemon juice add flavor and pep to any pie.

Brushing the bottom crust with egg whites helps it to stay crisp in fruit and custard pies.

In the country, I've tasted delicious pie crusts made with chicken fat, which can be purchased in some of the poultry markets today. When the fat from the chicken is rendered and cooled, it may be substituted for shortening in pastry. It is good and does the job well.

One country mother who could not afford shortening surprised me by making pie crust with cold, strained bacon fat. To tell the truth, I couldn't taste the difference. But it takes time to master all the little tricks that go into making unusual crust. So, when we are fortunate enough to have the best, let us make the most of it.

Making pie crust is not easy. Success cannot be attributed to luck, but to the simple directions and rules called for in the recipe.

It is always wise to try several recipes in order to find the one that is easiest for you, then stick to it until perfected. Remember the following fundamental rules: measure accurately, handle crust as little as possible, use cold or ice water, use cold shortening, and remember that wet, sticky pie crust dough is sure to make tough crust.

Try some of the following recipes for some real good down home eating.

PIE CRUST

1 cup flour
2 heaping tbsp. lard.
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 cup cold water

Place all ingredients in a mixing bowl and mix until you produce a flour as fine as cornmeal. Add a little cold water at a time, about one fourth cup until mixture will hold together. Roll out very thin on a floured board.

PLAIN PASTRY

2 cups sifted flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. vinegar
Cold water
2/3 cup shortening
1/2 tsp. sugar
Pinch of baking powder

Sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder. Add shortening. Cut in with a fork or using pastry blender. Pour the vinegar and water into the flour mixture, a few drops at a time, mixing with a fork until it will hold together. Chill. Roll out as quickly as possible. Makes a double crust for a nine inch pie for two pie shells.

BUTTER PASTRY

2 cups sifted flour
1/2 tsp. sugar
1 scant cup butter
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 cup ice water

Sift flour, sugar and salt. Cut in butter with pastry blender or fork until coarse as cornmeal. Add just enough water to hold together. Chill. Roll out to one eighth inch thickness. Makes one eight inch pie or two shells.

EXTRA FLAKY PASTRY

2 cups flour
1 tsp. salt
3/4 cup shortening
Cold water

Mix and sift flour and salt. Cut in half of the shortening and add enough water to make a stiff dough. Roll out on a slightly floured board and dot with bits of shortening. Fold dough over and roll again. Fold once more. Add more shortening and repeat until all shortening is rolled into dough. Chill and use same as plain pastry. Makes one nine inch two crust pie.

BLACKBERRY ROLL

1 box blackberries
one tsp. lemon juice
2 tbsp. butter
Crust for one pie
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. nutmeg
1 tbsp. flour

Wash berries, sprinkle with sugar and spices. Add lemon juice. Roll crust into rectangular shape, very thin. Sprinkle with flour and dot with butter. Pour berries over dough. Roll tightly, as jelly roll. Place in moderate oven, 350 degrees.

Mix together one tbsp. butter one third cup sugar and juice of one orange and baste roll with this mixture for approximately 30 minutes. Serve warm with orange sauce. Serves 6 to 8.

CHERRY ROLL

2 cups sifted flour
3 tsps. baking powder
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
6 tbsp. shortening
2/3 cup milk
1 can red cherries
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. mace

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in shortening with pastry blender or fingers. Add milk gradually to form a soft dough. Kneed lightly. Roll out to one fourth inch thickness. Drain juice from cherries. Add sugar, mace and vanilla to cherries and spread over dough.

Roll like a jelly roll. Dot with butter. Pour two cups of water over roll which will produce its own sauce. Bake 35 to 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Serves 6 to 8.

Here is another quick goody to prepare for the holidays when unexpected company pops in.

OATMEAL CAKE

Pour 1 1/4 cups hot water over 1 cup uncooked oats. Let stand.

Mix 1 cup white sugar
1 cup brown sugar, 1/2 cup shortening and 2 eggs until smooth.

Sift 1 1/4 cups flour, 1 teaspoon cinammon, 1 teaspoon soda and 1/2 teaspoon salt together and add to egg mixture; mix well. Take oat mixture and 1/2 cup raisins, add to the batter and mix well.

Pour into greased and lightly floured pan in 350- degree oven for 35 minutes.

ICING

3/4 stick butter
2 tbsp. cream
1 cup brown sugar

Blend well before pouring on cake.

Add icing to the cake after the cake has baked for 25 minutes. Simply pour icing over top of cake, then replace cake in oven to finish baking (about 10 minutes).

Letters to the Editor

TO ALL SOUTHEAST MISSOURI FARMERS

The day after election there was a quote on the radio and on the national news, that our senator, Thomas Eagleton stated that Secretary Butts should be made an ambassador to some foreign country to get him out of the United States. It is my personal view and I believe it is the view of almost every farmer in Southeast Missuri, that Mr. Butts is the only secretary that we have ever had that has had the farmer's interest at heart and at the same time the consumers. It appears to me there is a bunch of burocrats that would like to lower the cost of inflation thru the farmer. It wouldn't lower the cost very much if we gave our products away. I was surprised that Senator Eagleton would make a statement like that, after coming to our section of the state and getting as much support as he did from rural Missouri. Maybe four years from now the reception he gets here won't be the same.

W. C. Bryant

Nov. 7, 1974

Dear Sir:

I voted a straight Republican ticket last Tuesday and I am proud of it. The media did a better job keeping up with the electioin in 74 than they did in 70. I heard on Channel 6 news that only 2 of about 15 knew just one candidate was for congress of the first district of Kentucky and the rest didn't know any of them. I think it is about time for people to know some of their candidates that they are voting on. I predict Danforth will run for Senator in 76. I hear that .76 is going to be exciting if Bond runs for senator. The Democratic primary is going to be a hot race for Governor, Senator Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General. I would hope to see the hot races in Kentucky again in 1975. I wonder when there going to talk about it. I hope I get to see them get hotter than 1963. I seen a film on Chandler in that year by Breattitt it was really bad I couldn't believe it. I have just heard who was going run next year. From the count there is three people running are going to announce. It is interesting to see what Jullian Carroll is going to do.

Yours sincerely
Alan Whitaker

Dear Sir:

I am enclosing a copy of my response to a recent "Letter to the Editor" which appeared in the Sikeston Daily Standard. I hope that you will find the letter suitable for publication so that both sides of this issue can be expressed.

Should you decide to publish this letter, I must ask that my signature be included.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely yours,
E. H. Webb,
Fiscal Officer
Delta Area Head Start

A recent letter to the Editor entitled "Headstart Needs a New Grantee" raised several points which certainly call for clarification. Obviously the author of that unsigned letter made no effort to present the positive aspects of the Headstart Program in the Bootheel. Worst of all, no consideration whatever was shown for the 1,300 children who now receive nourishing meals, qualified medical attention, and educational preparation for elementary school through the efforts of the Headstart Program and Headstart personnel. Let's keep in mind that the primary purpose of Headstart is to help needy preschool children. The "Letter to the Editor" ignores these children and approximately 250 hard working, dedicated, underpaid employees who are involved in making the Program work for the benefit of these children. The person who wrote the letter published on November 6 shows an amazing lack of concern for the many benefits derived by Headstart enrollees. All too literally, he or she is ready to "throw out the baby with the dishwater."

As for DAEOC's operation of the Headstart Program, I was intrigued by the fact that the author referred several times to "policy violations" without identifying a specific "policy" or so much as one specific violation. In regard to the termination of Mr. John Porter, former Social Service Director, the author stated that Mr. Porter was never advised of the charges against him. This statement is absolutely untrue; Mr. Porter was informed in writing of the reasons for his termination. I believe that anyone concerned with proper business procedure as the author of that letter seemed to be should recognize that an employee who does not perform his work satisfactorily should have the problem explained to him, be asked to make the necessary improvements, and finally be dismissed if he consistently refuses to follow reasonable directions and fulfill his duties in a mature and responsible manner. Unfortunately for everyone, particularly the children involved, Mr. Porter did not accept the full responsibilities of his role with Headstart; his employment was therefore terminated. Someone who is so interested in the traditions of our country must realize that the American business system is founded on the right of a supervisor to instruct and supervise his employees. It is also founded on the principle that the employee should understand his duties and fulfill his responsibility. What kind of a country would we have if everyone did exactly as he pleased with his work, blatantly ignored the instructions of his supervisors, and then refused to leave when employment was terminated? The author is prescribing "backroom business" in the worst sense of the term.

As for a lack of concern with DAEOC's operation of Headstart on the part of the Regional Office of Child Development in Kansas City, the author shomehow failed to mention that a four-man evaluation team from Kansas City spent nearly three days in the Bootheel this week conducting a full investigation of Headstart and DAEO C. This team was doing what the author should do if he or she is REALLY interested in the Headstart Program -- they came down to see for themselves. Any interested parent who is concerned about Headstart would be welcomed in any of the twenty-two Delta Area Headstart Centers or in the Central Headstart Office at Hayward. Then their view of the situation wuld at least have a basis in fact.

For a point of information, Mr. C. B. Huber is considered an excellent Director and is highly respected by the vast majority of the Headstart personnel. His annual salary compared to area Superintendents of Schools is quite low and his administration includes 1,300 pre-school children over a six-county area with 22 Centers. Speaking personally, I wouldn't accept the criticism of uninformed individuals like the person who wrote that letter for TWICE that amont of money!

Sincerely,
E. H. Webb,
Fiscal Officer
Delta Area Head Start

Thousands of migrating swallows recently became too cold and hungry to fly over the Alps. Bird lovers started a program which transported some birds to warmer climates by airliner and train. The French Bird Protection League has reported that the birds have reacted badly to this act of mercy and were dying in "increasing numbers," The World Almanac notes. The league suggests that cold birds be warmed, fed and then set free.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

November 14, 1974

To the editor:

In a recent column (11-3-74), Jack Anderson charged that the U.S. sought to bankrupt the Allende government by denying multinational bank loans to Chile." He suggested that the U.S. had succeeded in this, bringing about Chile's "financial strangulation." This conclusion by Anderson was based on the assertion that Chile had come to depend on loans from the Inter-American Development Bank, and these were cut off.

Anderson is in error. Disbursements of Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) loans to Chile were actually higher during the three years Allende was in office than in the three preceding years. The bank disbursed 79 million dollars in Chile in 1971-73, compared to $70 million in 1968-70.

It is also incorrect that Chile was heavily dependent on these IDB loans. IDB loan disbursements have never financed more than a fraction of Chile's imports. They were a their highest in 1972, when they amounted to $29 million. This was enough to pay for about 2.5 per cent of Chile's import bill. These loans have also represented only a small part of Chile's external borrowing.

Those who exaggerate the importance of the IDB loans to Chile and who falsely state that denial of these loans to Chile was an important cause of Chile's economic deterioration under Allende are usually trying to transfer the blame for Allende's economic mismanagement to someone else.

Allende confiscated large amounts of foreign property without paying for it, and he defaulted on most of Chile's f - oreign debt. It is not surprising that many lenders and investors were not eager to make new loans to Chile. However, Allende did manage to finance a huge increase in Chile's imports, partly by using the money that should have gone for the payment of interest and principal on the foreign debt. Imports rose from $1 billion in 1970 to $1.6 billion in 1973.

But even this was not enough to offset the inflationary pressures generated by Allende's fiscal and monetary policies and by the fall in domestic production. The multinational banks could not very well signal their support of these harmful policies by authorizing new loans for Chile. In the Allende years they disbursed against loans that had been authorized before Allende took office. The decline in new loan authorizations during the Allende regime will be reflected in a lower level of disbursements in the period after Allende's fall.

Sincerely yours,
Reed J. Irvine

Teen awarded $1,350,000 in injury suit

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A Ballwin teen-ager who lost the use of both arms when he touched a live power line last year has been awarded $1,350,000 in damages by a St. Louis Circuit Court jury.

The jury ruled Monday that Paul Glastris, 15, was injured because of negligence by Union Electric Co. and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

The youth was severely shocked Feb. 1, 1973, after he climbed what he thought was an abandoned power pole and accidentally touched a live wire.

The jury said the telephone and electric companies had failed to post "high voltage" warnings at the site.

Cline viewed as probable contender

Several names are being mentioned as possible Democratic contenders in a 1976 quest to unseat long-term State Sen. Albert M. Spradling Jr. of Cape Girardeau, and it is drawing mixed reaction from area top party officials on the possibility of Southeast Missouri losing its most powerful representation in Jefferson City.

The most probable contender is a young Scott County Democrat, C. F. Cline of Sikeston, who during slightly less than two years as 159th District state representative, has indicated strong ambitions for higher office.

While most area Democratic leaders agree that Cline's chances of defeating the state's senior senator are slim, some concede the possibility exists. Those who experess concern over the possiblity of Spradling's defeat foresee Cline favoritism in the four west-edge counties of the 27th Senatorial District, largely because voters there are said to have little or no contact with their state senator.

Spradling, in his sixth term, has not faced opposition since the redistricting of the state's senatorial districts in 1972. The Supreme Court-ordered change in the 27th Senatorial District added the counties of Bolinger, Wayne, Reynolds, Carter, and Ripley to the existing counties of Cape, Scott and Mississippi, and transferred Perry and Ste. Genevieve Counties to the 22nd District.

Should Cline file for the Senate seat, some party officials believe the 35-year-old legislator could carry the four newly-added counties of the district and possibly gain votes in Scott and Mississipii counties because of his ties to that area.

Still, the majority of Democratic officials believe Spradling has surmounted the esteem of persuasive party members in the two Democratic strongholds and would experience little difficulty in mustering the necessary votes from Scott and Mississippi counties, which rank second nd third, respectively, next to Cape County, in voter population.

There is little question among party leaders that Spradling would overwhelmingly carry Cape County in a possible 1976 Democratic primary. And, they say, Spradling would easily win Cape County in a general election that year should a Republican candidate become a contender.

But there is little talk at present of a GOP nominee for Spradling' seat. The name of Gary W. Rust of Cape Girardeau, representative of the 156th Legislative District [illegible] 1972 and an unsuccessful candidate against 10th District U. S. Rep. Bill D. Burlison in 1970, has been mentioned as a Republican contender, but Rust says he is "pleased," with his present position and has "no plans to be a contender for state senator in this district."

Among other possible Democratic contenders are 160th District State Rep.. Frederick W. DeField of Charleston; Scott County Prosecuting Attorney James Moore and 155th District State Rep. Marvin E. Proffer of Jackson. Former Scott County prosecuting attorney, Thomas Gilmore, son of D. W. Gilmore who Spradling was elected to succeed in 1952, is considered a formidable forthcoming Democratic senatorial contender, but he says he will not run against Spradling.

The senator himself expresses little worry over the possibility of his being defeated two years hence. He readily admits he is not campaign-oriented -- a striking opposite from Cline -- but, he contends, he cannot carry on a stringent campaign and conduct his legislative affairs at the sametime.

"The people are either going to want a hand-shaker or a legislator. I can't do both," Spradling said when asked his reaction to Cline's almost certain contention. "He (Cline) doesn't frighten me the least bit. I thin k the voters of this district would look more at the record than the hand-shaking," he declared.

The record the senator was referring to was his wealth of legislative accomplishments during his 22 years in the Senate, over which, he has amassed numerous appointments to and chairmanships of some of the most powerful committees of the Senate, including chairman of the Committees on Accounts, Assignments and Clerical Force; Banks, Banking and Financial Institutions and Government Reorganization.

But some party leaders believe that during the course of his reign, Spradling has overlooked portions of his constituency — particularly the additional counties that came into the district two years ago — and has isolated himself from the individual voter.

Some party sources speculate that Spradling would step down from his post rather than carry out a vigorous campaign effort against a host of possible contenders. But Spradling calmed that speculation.

"They said the same thing of the 1964 primary," the senator rebutted. "I didn't step down then and I don't plan to now. I plan to file for re-election on my birthday (March 13) in 1976, as I have always done."

Cline says he has not made any firm commitments to anyone on filing against Spradling, but admits he is "very much interested in that office."

"Many leading Democrats from throughout the district have called me and urged me to run and I have had many offers of support," said. "I have discussed the possibility (of running) with many people in the district and have been feeling the pulse of the people to see if they are happy with the senator." He would not elaborate on his contacts' reactions.

"It's still a long way off," Cline said. "If I do file it will be early in 1976."

One of Cline's would-be supporters, a top area Democrat who asked not to be named, said many people are "disenchanted with the senator." The source said "He has become a statesman rather than a representative of the district. He has lost touch with the people. If he doesn't campaign, C. F. (Cline) will beat him."

Cline supporters agree that if Cline should file prematurely it likely would open the door to numerous other Democratic primary filings and result in a scattering of votes, leaving Spradling overwhelmingly victorious.

The Democrat most party leaders consider as Spradlng's most likely successor is Gilmore, whom some label as "Spradling's hand-chosen successor." Spradling said he has a high regard for the young Sikestonian and "He would make a fine senator."

Asked about his possible contention, Gilmore replied "I haven't given it two seconds worth of thought.

"I have become accustomed to Al Spradling watching over the district's interests. I would not run if Spradling runs. If he decided against running, I would seriously consider it, but I wouldn't say for sure," Gilmore stated.

Spradling has faced opposition in only one Democratic primary election since he was elected in 1952 to fill out the Senate Term of D. W. Gilmore, who resigned to become judge of the 28th Judicial Circuit. He was unopposed in both the 1956 and 1960 primary and general elections, when the district was composed only of Cape, Scott and Mississippi counties.

His only oppositioin in a primary election came in 1964, when Fred A. Steck filed against him. Spradling defeated Steck by a vote of 11,330 to 8,878 in the five counties of Cape, Scott, Mississippi, Perry and Ste. Genevieve that composed the district at that time. Spradling went on in that year's general election to defeat the Republican contender, Ruben R. Schade, by a vote of 32,0407 to 13,644.

In 1968, Spradling defeated Republican candidate Clinton M. Wunderlich, now Cape County treasurer, by a vote of 26,614 to 16,575.

Sugar prices take another big jump

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—Sugar prices took another big jump in Missouri this week, going up 36 cents for a 10-pound bag, a survey by the Missouri Farm Bureau Federation showed today.

The average for the state last week was $4.30 a bag and this week it is $4.66. The highest price was $5.39 at some stores in central Missouri. Other stores in central Missouri also had the lowest, $3.95 a bag.

Last spring sugar was selling for around $3 a bag in Missouri.

The survey of about 50 stores around the state showed slight decreases in pork prices, except for ham, which was up seven cents.

Chicken prices were lower by 2 cents a pound for whole fryers and four cents for cut up fryers.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — About six months ago my brother had an operation. His legs were bothering him so bad he could not walk without pain. The doctors found he had calcium deposits in his arteries and the blood was not getting through. They operated on him and, from what I understand, did a bypass of the clogged arteries with plastic. Anyway, the operation was very successful and he is once again very active.

The doctors also told him he had a slight case of emphysema. He has been told repeatedly he should not smoke (he smoked around three packs a day). He has cut down considerably, but will not quit.

To be frank with you, I don't think he believes the doctors when they say it could cause him more problems. He has a family, and I think he is being very selfish, but since I have never smoked maybe I don't understand what it's all about. Please explain just what could happen. He is 56.

DEAR READER — He sounds like most smokers. Cutting down helps some, but a person who already has lung changes should quit entirely. The tissues in the lungs affected by cigarette smoking need to be free of exposure entirely so the cells can start to grow normally again. It will take several years to get the maximum benefit from stopping smoking anyway. As long as he continues to smoke the damage from heavy smoking will not be adequately reversed.

As the lung changes progress they reach a point where it is impossible to reverse the process. These people end up literally dying gasping for breath. It is one of the most unpleasant deaths I know of and rivals or equals the problems of widespread cancer. You can relieve pain in cancer, but there is almost nothing the doctors can do to relieve the breathless, smothering feeling of the person with advanced lung disease.

Beyond this is the problem of lung cancer, which occurs almost exclusively in male smokers, and the problems of heart and vascular disease. The diseased artery your brother had surgery for is warning enough. The changes began with fatty deposits in the arteries and then calcified. The same thing happens in the heart. Sudden death from heart attack in smokers is almost three times the rate in nonsmokers with all other factors being equal.

Strokes are also increased in heavy cigarette smokers. Your brother should be thankful he is not already crippled from disease of his arteries and can thank those wonderful advances in medicine that have made it possible for him to have a second chance. A stroke may not give him a second chance. He could be severely disabled but still alive.

Yes, he is at the very least not giving enough weight to the seriousness of his problems. It is tough to quit smoking, but not impossible. Men, incidentally are more successful at this than women. He needs to quit, not cut down or use a milder cigarette. No one should smoke, in my opinion, but certainly no one with his medical problems.

Group dissatisfied with country music events

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "Our gripe, if we have one, is that these people want to come in and take our music away," said Bill Anderson, in one sentence summing up a week of dissension and controversy in country music.

Anderson and about 50 of the more traditional country music artists are the founders of the Association of Country Entertainers (ACE), formed last week to protest the influx of "these people" into country music.

Chairman Anderson and other ACE members were never really specific about who "these people" were. But one thing was certain, they weren't truly country.

Three days after the ACE was formed last week, two of its members wereelected officers of the Country Music Association.

Not that the voices of Porter Wagoner and Tammy Wynette can change the CMA, but their election shows how seriously the music industry regarded the events which led up to ACE's stormy beginning last Tuesday night.

The artists indicated that they were fed up with a series of so called progressive changes in the industry. They weren't happy with where country music was going. And, although few admitted it publicly, some were afraid they were being left behind.

Entertainer Billy Walker expressed the frustrations of a country music stalwart in a world where upstarts and foreigners have the hit songs.

"Country music is a way of life," he said. "Most of us in this group have been in this town (Nashville) for years. We have fought the road to take the music industry where it is today.

"Then others want to take it over ...."

By others Walker meant "people from California and the East Coast."

"This used to be a very simple, trustworthy town," he said. "Then these people came in and prostituted our business and watered down our music. This was done by big money on the East and West Coast.

"Now, it's a cliquish, political town."

This year's Country Music Association awards were, Anderson said, "the straw that broke the camel's back."

Whereas in the past, a goodly share of the top CMA awards went to such unabashedly country entertainers as Johnny Cash, Charley Pride, Loretta Lynn and Roy Clark, two of the top 1974 awards went to artists with major "cross-over" hits.

Charlie Rich, who some say isn't really country, was named entertainer of the year. His recent hits, including "Most Beautiful Girl" and "Behind Closed Doors," were two of the biggest cross-over successes ever. Both went to the top of country and pop charts.

Likewise, Australian Olivia Newton-John, CMA female vocalist of the year, crossed from pop into country with her songs, "I Honestly Love You" and "If You Love Me."

This is what stuck in the traditionalists' craw — to win a CMA award you have to be a cross-over artist.

"When Olivia Newton-John has gone on network television, she has denied being a country music artist," Anderson said.

"We'd rather see a Tammy Wynette or a Loretta Lynn or an anybody who would say 'Yes, I'm country.'

"Olivia Newton-John's people have said they don't want her working personal appearances with the likes of Porter Wagoner, Tammy Wynette and George Jones."

The election of Wagoner and Miss Wynette to CMA posts Friday fulfilled Anderson's promise to get "more of a voice for artists in the Country Music Association."

During ACE's first week, the entertainers were not sure what it was they hoped to do, except to define country music as music performed by an artist who says he's country — a move to exclude artists from crossing over from pop and taking country music awards.

CMA officers do not, however, have a voice in CMA policy making, the preserve of the board of directors, which was elected earlier this year. Also, the CMA awards are voted by the organization's 4,000-plus membership.

'Kung Fu' star fined

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor David Carradine was fined $250 and placed on one year's probation after the star of the television series "Kung Fu" entered a plea of no contest to misdemeanor charges of mischief and trespass.

Municipal Court Judge Clarence A. Stromwall passed sentence Wednesday after Carradine entered the plea. The actor had been charged with breaking into a neighbor's Laurel Canyon home last Sept. 15 and smashing windows, rifling a bathroom medicine cabinet and overturning furniture.

O.W. McCutchen was a business visitor in Campbell a few days of last week.

Morehouse--Ernest Crumpecker gave a dinner in honor of his Sunday School class of young men at the home of Mrs. W.R. Griffin on Friday. The class was organized and officers were elected for the coming year.

W.B. Spaulding of St. Louis spent the weekend in Sikeston looking after business interests.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Charlie!

I would like you to print my letter to the parents of school children.

If you have a son, or daughter come home with a jacket, tennis shoes, sweats, or any article that you have not gotten for him, please, for the sake of other parents, who work hard to pay for what their kids wear, question him about where and how he got it. It wuld help to stop a lot of thiefts in our school systems. And MAYBE help your child in the future.

My son bought and paid with money he earned himself, a school jacket, and the first day he wore it to school, had it stolen.

It is very upsetting for the kids as well as the parents.

If you have ever bought one, you know how expensive they are.

Letter To The Editor

I, Bob Daniels as a concerned citizen to other citizens would like to give my views and make statements pertaining to the mandatory solid waste problems we are experiencing, as a result of this Solid Waste Act. I would also like to comment on a publication by Mayor Cravens of New Madrid appearing in the Weekly Record, which I feel came a little late.

Basic question, Does the act require a city either to provide the service directly or to contract with an independent hauler to p rovide service to all residents or does the law permit the city to enact regulations which would require residents to enter into a contract with a private hauler without the city itself becoming a party to such contractical agreement.

I believe only the courts of the State of Mo. can answer this question and other questions pertaining to the Solid Waste Act. The Attorney Gen's. answer and opinion, as stated in the Weekly Record by Mayor Cravens publication is that the State of Mo. will rule in this way. However it is also his opinion, No. 63, that no record can be found ruling whether or not a municipality has the right to terminate utilities for failure to pay garbage collection charges, although it has been held in Mo. that a municipality operating a waterworks for profit was acting in a proprietary capacity and could be sued for damages for wrongfully cutting off a customer's water supply. Whitsitt vs. City of St. Clair 80 3. W. 2d 696 (St. L. Ct. app. 1935).

I feel the city board of New Madrid should have publically made known all facts and issues of the different ways outlined by the Solid Waste Act to pick-up the solid waste and different ways outlined to collect for service charges, and the public accept a favorible means after public vote has been given.

Section 260.210 par: 1 states, and I read only part of this section; and shall not prohibit the disposal of or require a permit for disposal by an individual of solid wastes resulting from his own residential activities on property owned or lawfully occupied by him when such wastes do not thereby create a public nuisance or adversely affect the public health.

My comment on Mayor Craven's second question of the Weekly Record Publication. I now state the question again, Does the city have the right to bill the customer for solid waste pickup?

Mayor Craven's answer pointed to sect. 4.1 of Mr. Danforths opinion and I quote. Sec. 4.1 of the solid waste law which authorized cities and counties to levy and collect charges for collection and disposal services. This would not allow a city or county to authorize its trash contractor to levy and collect service charges. The Attorney Gen. therefore concludes it is the responsibility of the city, not the contractor, to do the billing.

When I read section 4.1 of Mr. Danforth's opinion written to Honorable J. H. Frapper, Representative, District 56, it read like this.

Sect. 4.1 of the solid waste act authorizes cities and counties tolevy and collect service charges and to levy an annual tax, after favorable public vote (sect. 10) I am not reading all of sec. 4.1 only completing the part Mayor Cravens quoted. The interpertation of this section and just what it does mean is in question, But you the people be the judge. I still want to ask if you were ever given the right to vote on this issue??

The case of Cassidy vs. city of Bowling Green that Mayor Craven's mentions is in the State of Kentucky and did rule that a discontinuation of utilities may be imposed upon the failure to pay a related bill for garbage disposal, But in the State of Nebraska in the Case of Garner vs. Aurora it was ruled that the authorities are uniform to the effect that a public service corporation can not refuse to furnish its public service because the patron is in arrears with it on account of some collateral or independent transaction not strictly connected with the particular physical service.

The State of Missouri has never made a ruling on this issue and no cases can be found on record in Mo. respecting this question. So, can the Missouri Municipality's legally disconnect utilities because, as is my case, I refused to pay a collection charge for solid waste service, I did not receive even though I tendered payment for every other utility services! Yes, I did refuse to carry my trash to the front curb because publication in the New Madrid Weekly Record stated pickup would be made either by alley or curb side. This publication as I read it, meant that if there were no alleys, as is the case in parts of our city, there would be curb side pick-up and where there were alleys pick up would be made in said alleys. I do not remember reading any limitations being put on which alleys they would or would not pick up in. I have an alley beside my res.: which the city refuses to recognize as an alley, but calls it a 25 ft. no mans land, Yes it is a dead end alley, but it is still on the city maps and the city board checked records as far back as 1951 and could not find any record of this 25 ft. ?(alley) ever being abandoned. We now have to the rear of the huse pick-up for an additional charge of $1.25 or $3.50 per mo. and you must request this service from the city before receiving same. But even this was not made available to us until a group of citizens approached the Mayor and city board on the issues, and later it was published as, "Madrid board hears gripes on garbage and sewer problems."

Thank you
Bob Daniels
New Madrid Citizen

Today in U. S. History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 20, the 324th day of 1974. There are 41 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, 24 Nazi leaders were put on trial before an international war crimes tribunal at Nuernberg, Germany.

On this date:

In 1818, the South American liberator, Simon Bolivar, declared Venezuela independent of Spain.

In 1870, German troops surrounded Paris during the Franco-Prussian War.

In 1893, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the Great Lakes and their connecting waters were high seas.

In 1917, the World War I Battle of Cambria began in France.

In 1942, the Alaska highway across Canada was formally opened.

In 1947, Princess Elizabeth of Britain married Lieutenant Philip Mountbatten in a ceremony at Westminiter Abbey in London.

Ten years ago: Chairman Roy Howard of the Scripps-Howard newspapers died in New York at the age of 82.

Five years ago: Vice President Spiro Agnew made a broad attack against the news media, singling out the New York Times and the Washington Post for his harshest criticism.

One year ago: The Senate Rules Committee approved the Nomination of Gerald Ford as Vice President after the resignation of Agnew.

Today's birthday: Actress Gene Tierney is 54.

Thought for today: We don't seem to be able to check crime, so why not legalize it and then tax it out of business — Will Rogers, American humorist, 1879-1935.
